There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Township hires extra help

Public-aid applicants increase threefold

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Ninety persons a month, many of them laid-off waitresses, truck drivers and factory workers, are walking into the Wheeling Township Hall and asking for help to pay the bills.

The 90 new monthly cases represents a significant increase in township general assistance applications — only 30 new applications were made each month last summer — and has caused the township to hire an additional caseworker.

Jane Klatt, the township's social services director, was hired in June because of the rapidly increasing general assistance program.

The township hired another full-time case worker this month, and will consider hiring a third full-time caseworker in the spring to help process general assistance applications.

WHEELING TOWNSHIP has increased its general assistance budget by $30,000, and anticipates having to allocate more than $100,000 in the next fiscal year, which begins April 1, Mrs. Klatt said.

Townships are required by law to offer some form of emergency temporary assistance to township residents. The funds for general assistance come from the taxes levied by the township and from the township's other general income, Mrs. Klatt said.

Wheeling Township offers temporary financial assistance for food, rent and utilities until the resident has been accepted for state or federal assistance, she said.

Mrs. Klatt characterized most of the applicants as working people who "have made enough money to give their families a comfortable life, and manage to meet the payments on their home and other basic expenses."

MOST OF THESE people were unable to save money while they were working, and have no financial security to draw from now that they are unemployed, she said.

Not as many younger couples or senior citizens have applied to Wheeling Township for general assistance, although applications from them "have begun to increase," Mrs. Klatt said.

"Young people who have been to college are used to skimping and learning to get along on the basics. Older people have been through the Depression. It's the middle-aged person who is being hit the hardest by this economic situation," Mrs. Klatt said.

Other area townships are experiencing similar increases in general assistance applications, but several have only begun to consider hiring additional staff to handle the overload, she said.

Police probe bicyclist's death

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gadda Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dicks, also 15, of 1101 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchhoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports.

Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lighted at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

Cop gets suspension in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday after a village fire and police commission hearing on a department charge stemming from a fatal car crash last month.

Legal counsel for Patrolman David Mabbitt stipulated to the charge involving care of equipment and the suspension. The department charge was filed by Police Chief Martin Conroy Jan. 30, a day after the crash in which Christine Loran, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., Palatine Township, suffered fatal injuries.

Mabbitt's suspension is retroactive to Jan. 31, when he was placed on suspension pending Saturday's hearing. He is expected to return to duty in early March.

The department regulation, under which Mabbitt was charged, requires policemen to be responsible for the care of equipment assigned to them.

Mabbitt is slated to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided head on with the Loran vehicle. A county coroner's jury has ruled the Loran death as accidental.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $33.20 to $59.65 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.35.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $12.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS IN high school take an

Michigan schools — where even the pencils are free

In 1970, a Michigan parent took officials of the Ann Arbor school system to court about the constitutionality of charging fees for a free public education.

Later that year, the state supreme court ruled that schools must provide all required materials to students at no cost and Michigan launched the no-fee system. The court considers required materials everything from textbooks and workbooks to notebook paper and pencils.

While the Michigan system eliminates many required fees, parents still face some costs of education, said Josephine

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities,

One mother notes that basic fees are geared for the "average student," not those in accelerated courses, home economics, industrial arts or fine arts.

"Home economics is the biggest rip-off in the world. Some teachers insist you make an A-line skirt or a jumper — something the kids won't wear after it's made," she said.

The woman added that her daughter usually makes three projects a semester at costs ranging from $6 to $15.

PARENTS OF students in accelerated classes also complain of extra costs ranging from the expense of a special glaze for a ceramics course to the costs of extra paperback books for an honors English class.

School officials admit that many of the lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can't afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

THE EXTRAS in high school take an-

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.35 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average students will spend about $25 a year on books.

Bicyclist's death under police probe

Arlington Heights police are investigating an accident in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring the other two. Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights, was killed, and companions John Gaddis Jr. and Frank Dicks, both of Arlington Heights, were injured. Police said the bicyclists were riding single file on Kirchoff Road near Dwyer Avenue Friday night when they were struck by a car driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonquist Blvd., Mount Prospect. No charges have been filed pending completion of the investigation.

Cop suspended in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday in connection with an accident Jan. 30 in which a Palatine Township woman was killed. Patrolman David Mabbitt was put on suspension by the village's fire and police commission on a department charge involving care of equipment. He still faces a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road near Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided with a vehicle driven by Christine Lovan, 21, of Palatine Township.

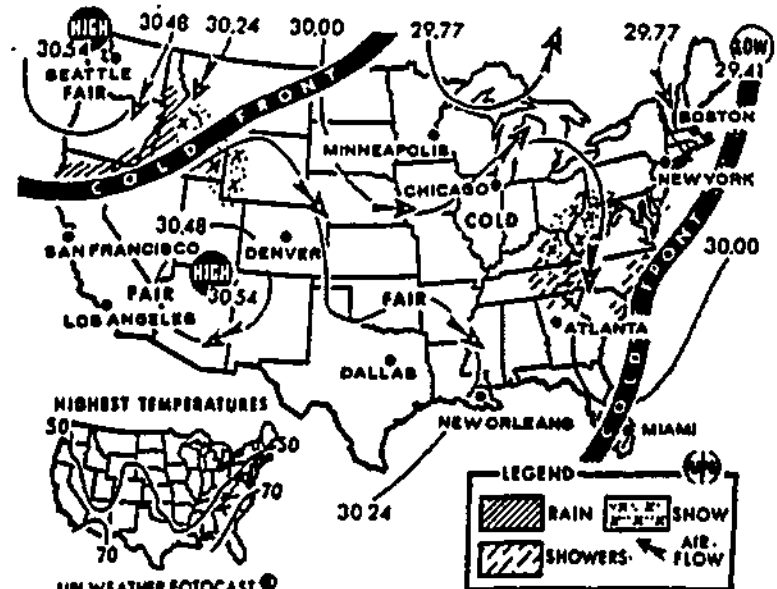

No 'easy answer': Mikva

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., is trying to get a little help from his friends. He gathered with 40 residents of his district Saturday to hear what they had to say about coping with the economy. His conclusion: "There is no one easy answer" to the nation's economic woes.

Township public-aid rolls up

Ninety persons a month, many of them laid-off waitresses, truck drivers and factory workers, are walking into the Wheeling Township Hall and asking for help to pay the bills. The result: The township has had to hire an additional caseworker and is considering hiring one more. "Young people who have been to college are used to skipping and learning to get along on the basics. Older people have been through the Depression. It's the middle-aged person who is being hit the hardest by this economic situation," said Jane Klatt, the township's social services director.

Little bit of everything...

AROUND THE NATION: showers and snow flurries are forecast in the eastern Ohio-Tennessee Valley. Showers and thunderstorms are expected over lower Florida. Rain is forecast from northern California into Idaho with snow in the northern Rockies. It will be fair in the Pacific Northwest and from southern California across the Southwest and Southern Plains with cloudy to partly cloudy skies elsewhere.

AROUND THE STATE: North, Central: snow ending with partly sunny skies and a little warmer; high in the 30s. South: rain changing to snow with partly sunny skies; highs in the upper 30s. Northern Indiana: rain gradually changing to light snow early today. Occasional periods of light snow. Accumulations of 1 to 2 inches. Cloudy and colder at night with a chance of snow flurries and highs in the 30s.

ready to demand his resignation. "I think he needs some time and we should give him the opportunity to prove himself innocent," Nimrod said. "He said he would do nothing to cause problems or embarrass the party."

"We are under no pressure and it's a long time before we have to do anything within the party. I have confidence in him and I think we will see some action on his part before the party has to act."

Bernard E. Pederson, Palatine Township committeeman, said his organization would meet to discuss the poll before any vote is forwarded to Fulle.

"Most of us are surprised about the indictment, but he's entitled to his day in court and I can't prejudge him," Pederson said. "We have to consider what's right for Floyd and the party and answers that are fair to both."

Pederson added that the Palatine Republican organization probably will meet within the next few days to discuss the situation in order to respond promptly to the poll.

COUNTY COMR. Carl Hansen, Elk Grove Township committeeman, said he would not commit himself to a vote until discussing the matter with his organization. "When and if we do get a poll it will be discussed and taken up with our group," Hansen said.

Hansen added he expects Fulle to make a decision on the matter when the central committee meets sometime after Tuesday's Chicago mayoral primary.

"I think it's a matter for the executive committee of the central committee to deliberate on after hearing from the chairman on his plans," Hansen said.

Fulle, the Republican county chairman and Maine Township GOP committeeman from Des Plaines, was indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with alleged zoning payoff schemes and lying before a grand jury.

Will Chicago still toddle for Daley on Tuesday?

by DAVID SMOTHERS
CHICAGO (UPI) — Will Chicago, that toddling town, still toddle for Richard J. Daley?

Probably. But Tuesday he faces what amounts to an affront to his 20-year civic majesty.

Three candidates of real or potential strength oppose him in the Democratic mayoral primary. It is the first time since he first ran for mayor that Dick Daley has been called upon to face such offshoots in his own party.

Chicago being what it is, he hardly ever had to worry about the Republicans on his way to an unprecedented five terms as mayor of the nation's second largest city — "the city which works," Daley loyalists aver, because Daley runs it.

Assuming he wins Tuesday, Daley probably will not have to worry about his sixth term, either. The only serious Republican in the race is an alderman who readily admits his main concern is being reelected to the City Council.

What must concern Daley are his Democratic challengers this week — a Gold Coast liberal alderman who learned at Daley's knee the necessity of building a political organization; a belligerent, Harvard-educated West Side Irishman who once carried Daley's fondest blessing; and a street-savvy state senator who is the first man to make a viable bid to become the first black mayor of this largely black city.

The probable order of finish Tuesday will be Daley, Alderman William S. Singer, former State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan, and State Sen. Richard H. Newhouse Jr.

Singer might give Daley a scare and could conceivably win. Newhouse's vote could be significant. Chicago is roughly 45 per cent black and the time may not be far away when it has a black mayor.

MAYOR DALEY

WILLIAM SINGER

EDWARD HANRAHAN

RICHARD NEWHOUSE

It was the black vote which toppled Hanrahan from office after he authorized a police raid in which police killed two leaders of the Black Panthers.

They are Daley's first challengers in a Democratic primary since 1965 because this is Daley's last time out and the old warrior is vulnerable at last — vulnerable but far from washed up.

He may be 72. He may be recovering from a stroke which sent him into surgery and kept him out of the big office on the fifth floor at City Hall most of last summer.

It may be that some of Daley's closest aides and associates have been involved, many of them convicted, in 15 major scandals since he last ran for mayor. It may be that more than 50 Chicago police have gone to jail, most of them for shakedowns.

It may be the mayor himself is accused of using his power to throw lucrative city insurance business to two of his sons and to send the political career of another soaring.

It may be that some of Daley's best wishers had hoped he would not make this last run. It may be that for the first time in his reign none of the major Chicago newspapers which invariably supported him do so now.

But he is still Dick Daley of Chicago. And when the band blares the invariable, raucous refrain of "Chicago, Chicago, that toddling town" and the mayor, slumped to fighting weight, his face ruddy and defiant, comes striding into yet another ward meeting, he is still the champ until someone proves otherwise.

Singer has worked the longest and hardest to knock off Daley.

He is only 34 and he has only been an alderman for six years. But he has been in Chicago politics up to his hips ever since he got out of Columbia Law School in 1965 and is a proven Daley-baiter.

He got into the City Council by beating Daley's man. He and the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson, a much publicized black activist, led the rebels who shoved Daley's delegation out of the 1972 Democratic convention.

He started running for mayor 14 months ago, visiting every one of Chicago's troubled and deteriorating schools and putting the blame for their condition on Daley. He won the endorsement of Field Enterprises Inc., which publishes two of Chicago's three major newspapers, the Sun-Times and the Daily News.

He also built an impressive, citywide organization. On Tuesday, Singer people claim, he will have 2,800 workers on the streets matched against Daley's 3,100 precinct captains.

Hanrahan and Newhouse can boast no such groundwork.

Hanrahan has worked the crime in the streets issue — a potent one since nearly 1,000 persons were murdered in Chicago last year. Newhouse, while professing he is in to win, has said, "We aim to show that there's a black vote in this town and that for too long it's been taken for granted and ignored."

None of the three can really lose. Four years from now, Chicago is bound to be needing new leadership and their 1975 campaigns will probably put them among the first in line.

The passing of the old order is a major reason why Daley wants to win this one big. He has called in his ward committees, one by one, to pass the word that there must be no slippage Tuesday. State's Attorney Bernard J. Carey, a Republican, has said the election may be Chicago's dirtiest since Daley was last in a primary fight.

It is in Daley's nature to want, not merely to beat Singer and the rest, but to crush them. A man of towering pride, he is also one of unblinking realism.

He knows that to keep Chicago working, if that is what he has done, he has to have what Chicagoans call clout — in this case the clout of a huge majority.

Over two decades, Daley has used his clout to dictate to presidents, to play a major hand in making some of them — John F. Kennedy, most notably, and, largely as a consequence, to bring to Chicago a steady flow of hundreds of millions in federal funds. That's some of the stuff that makes Chicago work.

Arab death squad intercepted

Israeli troops intercepted an Arab guerrilla death squad and killed one commando trying to cross the Lebanese border to seize hostages, the Tel Aviv military command said Sunday. Two other guerrillas fled back to Lebanon. They were members of the Popular Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine. In other world unrest Sunday:

• Ethiopian warplanes and artillery blasted Eritrean rebel positions north of Asmara in an attempt to break a guerrilla stronghold on the provincial capital. The government claimed its troops killed more than one third of the 6,000 rebels in the embattled province in 24 days.

• Troops quelled three hours of street rioting by 10,000 persons that left a 12-year-old boy dead of gunshot wounds and 45 other persons injured in Erzurum, Turkey.

Trains didn't yield; 27 dead

Officials said Sunday failure of either train to halt at a siding to let the other pass apparently caused Norway's worst rail accident Saturday night. Twenty-seven were killed and 15 injured in the head-on collision of two express trains crammed with ski vacationers. Rescue squads continued to work on the crushed derailed cars at the snowy crash site Sunday 100 miles north of Oslo.

Bridge collapses in North Carolina

A bridge over the Yadkin River collapsed Sunday night, throwing several cars into the river, according to the Yadkin County Sheriff's office in North Carolina. A spokesman said "there are two or three cars in the river." All available rescue units in Surry and Yadkin Counties were dispatched to the scene, just north of Winston-Salem in northwest North Carolina.

1 dead, 50 hurt by Alabama twister

One person was killed and at least 50 others injured Sunday when a tornado swept across Tuscaloosa, Ala., touching down in four areas. The twister moved northwesterly across Tuscaloosa and three surrounding communities, uprooting trees and damaging homes and businesses.

Kill coots to save migratory fowl

Wildlife authorities, using a spray plane, a helicopter and 11 boats, killed 3,000 more sick coots Sunday at the Back Bay wildlife refuge in Virginia Beach. The operation to destroy the diseased water birds began Saturday in an effort to prevent an avian cholera epidemic from spreading to a quarter million migratory fowl expected to arrive in the area soon. In Hopkinsville, Ky., meanwhile, after a week in which hundreds of thousands of blackbirds were killed by spraying, Army officials say they haven't even dented the problem. The sky at dusk still is an enormous black cloud of screeching birds.

Thurmond warns of CIA probes

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., warned Sunday against exposing this country's worldwide intelligence-gathering system while attempting to lay bare misdeeds of the Central Intelligence Agency. "The greater danger in the current investigations is not the disclosure of some misdeed, which should be revealed and corrected," he said, "but the complete uncovering of our international intelligence system."

Proponents of ERA looking to 1976

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Disappointed by eight defeats and only one victory this year, some proponents of the Equal Rights Amendment now concede they may not win final ratification until 1976.

The amendment, which would overturn any law that discriminates on the basis of sex, recently has been voted down on the floor of legislatures in Oklahoma, Arizona, Nevada, Georgia and Utah.

It also was defeated by a house committee in Indiana and buried by committee action in Virginia and Louisiana.

Only one state, North Dakota, has approved ERA since the start of 1975 — the year in which proponents originally predicted it would be incorporated into the U.S. Constitution. Four more legislatures must vote "yes" to provide the necessary 38 states for ratification.

Fred Wechsler, ERA expert for the National Women's Political Caucus, said she regrets that five of the recent defeats — in Arizona, Nevada, Utah, Indiana and Georgia — occurred within the span of one week. "It's bad when it comes all at once like that," she said.

"Maybe we'll have to wait until next year. That is certainly a real possibility now. The opposition seems to be strong."

Mary Brooks, an ERA specialist for the League of Women Voters, added that five defeats in one week destroyed any possibility of a "bandwagon."

But Wechsler noted the votes in Indiana and Oklahoma were the only real disappointments, because none of the other states were considered strong possibilities.

The leaders of a pro-ERA coalition of women's groups now are focusing their lobbying efforts in five states which still are expected to vote on the amendment this year.

Two of them, Illinois and Missouri, are understood to be leaning toward ratification of ERA. The others — North Carolina, South Carolina and Florida — are still in doubt.

The Missouri house already has ratified ERA and the senate is expected to cast its vote sometime in late March or early April. In Illinois, where neither chamber has acted this year, the senate is scheduled to vote on ERA March 4.

Committee hearings on ERA are scheduled in North Carolina and South Carolina over the next two weeks. But in Florida the legislature does not convene until April.

If ERA has not been ratified by 38 states within the next year, it will have lingered in the state legislatures longer than any other proposed constitutional amendment. And if it goes unratified until March 1979, it will die.

Two of the 34 states that ratified ERA, Tennessee and Nebraska, have since voted to rescind that action. But ERA proponents contend that such a vote cannot be rescinded.

Spur auto sales with lower prices: survey

by United Press International

Detroit's automakers say it can't be done, but many Americans say only lower prices will get them to buy a car.

Even now car dealers contacted in a nationwide survey by United Press International said they would rather see across-the-board price cuts rather than the selective cash rebates that expire Friday.

In Rochester, N.Y., Ellen Russell said she is aware of the rebates Detroit has been offering since mid-January to entice buyers into new car showrooms. But she said, "I can't afford to take advantage of it. Not many people can, even with the discount. It seems to me that the rebates should be applied permanently."

That's what Judson Landrum, a Chevrolet-Oldsmobile dealer in Wetumpka, Ala., would like to see. Rebates have helped, but he expects a decline in business once they end and said a price cut is needed "because the cars are all overpriced by the manufacturer."

Why no price cut? Or even an extension of the rebates?

Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford II said:

"In spite of retail price increases averaging $1,000 per car since the end of the 1973 model year, our profit margin has reached the vanishing point. We cannot reduce our prices at this time because we could not survive by selling more cars and losing money on every car we sell."

What happens after Feb. 28 should be learned this week, but General Motors has already indicated what it plans.

On the nine small models which have been eligible for $200 and $300 rebates, GM is "cutting" the prices from $104 to $113 by taking off some of the frills — now standard equipment like radial tires that will become optional equipment.

Schlesinger: without aid Cambodia falls

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Defense Secretary James Schlesinger said Sunday Cambodia will "absolutely" fall to the Communists if Congress fails to provide an additional $222 million to support the Phnom Penh government.

Phnom Penh is virtually surrounded by Communist forces. Its supplies have been cut off except for a U.S.-backed airlift.

Asked if the country will fall without more U.S. funding, Schlesinger said, "Absolutely. I think that the chances of their surviving over a period of many months are minimal without that additional assistance."

"We have now committed all of the funds that were made available, and without those funds Phnom Penh cannot survive."

Schlesinger also said he will order the armed services to eliminate the two-year enlistment by July 1 in order to cut training costs and have more experienced men in uniform. Minimum enlistment will then be three years.

On the battlefield, meanwhile, Communist troops attacked the edge of Nghia Hanh along the South China Sea coast 315 miles northeast of Saigon, killing eight government rangers and wounding 17 others.

Lt. Le Trung Hien of the Saigon Command said there were no Communist casualties.

Communist gunners also fired 96 mortar rounds into seven other government positions in Quang Ngai province, wounding five troops.

Near the port city of Da Nang Communist troops fired 29 mortar rounds and attacked small government posts, killing one government infantryman and wounding 15 others.

113-acre site in Arlington Heights

Land acquisition begins for lake

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights has started land condemnation proceedings for Lake Arlington, but it will still be at least several more years before the wind ripples any water on the 113-acre site along McDonald Creek.

When completed Lake Arlington will be one of the largest recreational lakes in the Northwest suburbs. Intended primarily as a flood-control project, the lake will be north of Palatine Road and east of Windsor Drive and would have a variety of recreational uses.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding, said the village has filed to condemn 63 of the 113 acres needed for the lake.

But because the village hopes to receive assistance from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in building the $7.5 million lake, it could be some time before plans are drawn and construction started, he said.

THE VILLAGE board last week approved an application for state funds that could pay half the cost of acquiring the 68 acres, up to $232,000. The money is available under an open lands program of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

The rest of the land will have to be paid for by the village using federal-revenue sharing and general obligation bonds, Palmatier said.

The village board already has committed $750,000 from federal revenue-sharing and $4.1 million in general obligation bonds to pay for land acquisition and the construction of several flood-control projects.

Additional money for the Lake Arlington land probably will have to be added to the $4.1 million bond issue which covers only the first phase of a comprehensive $16 million program, Palmatier said.

"I feel we need to acquire the Lake Arlington land to keep it from becoming involved in some development," Palmatier said. The property is now undeveloped.

Once built, the lake would be irregularly shaped and would be large enough for boating and fishing. It would be more than twice the size of Lake Opeka, at Lee and Howard streets in Des Plaines. Lake Opeka is operated by the Des Plaines Park District and is used for small sailboats, canoeing, rowing and fishing.

PALMATIER SAID once the village acquires the Lake Arlington land it probably will lease it to the Arlington Heights Park District for recreational use even before the lake is built.

He said the village is condemning the 68 acres, which lie immediately south of the Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way, because discussions with the property's owners have made it apparent they were not willing to sell the land at a reasonable price.

Three other property parcels are needed to complete the lake site. Two lie north of the Edison right-of-way and the third, 25 acres, is part of the proposed second campus site for Harper College at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads.

Zoning reform needed in county

It did not require the federal indictments of two county commissioners to tell suburbanites that something is wrong with the way Cook County controls zoning and development in unincorporated areas.

A glance across the landscape at some of the apartment complexes and commercial areas on the fringes of suburban cities and villages tells the story just as forcefully.

Regardless of the disposition of charges against commissioners Floyd T. Fulle and Charles S. Bonk, who are accused of shaking down developers, this latest scandal should prompt a reexamination of county zoning procedures.

The first step should be a moratorium on issuance of building permits for large apartment complexes. As the federal investigation proceeds, more disclosures of alleged payoffs for zoning can be expected. Let's be sure not to start any developments that owe their existence solely to a satchel of cash passed to a county official.

We also urge the county board to approve no more rezonings for projects that will have a major impact on nearby areas until the county's new comprehensive plan for unincorporated areas is adopted later this year.

When the investigation is completed and the plan adopted, we will have a better idea which decisions were corrupt or questionable. There will also be objective, up-to-date standards for development in unincorporated areas.

Rezoning decisions are supposed to reflect the "highest and best use" of land. But this concept in recent years has been debased by so-called experts whose opinions about "highest and best use" hinge entirely on what the person paying them wants to hear. To justify rezoning on the basis of testimony by these paid experts makes no sense.

Tomorrow...

EDITORIAL: Floyd Fulle should take a leave of absence from the Cook County Board.

An updated plan will not solve all problems with county zoning but it will provide a good basis for reasonable decisions. We think the plan should recognize that high-density development is not appropriate in most of the unincorporated areas where the county still has zoning jurisdiction.

Steps are also needed to provide more community control over the development process. Suburban officials who are corrupt or subservient to developers can usually count on being voted out of office. County officials whose mistakes or misdeeds result in poor development have no such fear.

In practice they are unaccountable for their zoning decisions to the communities those decisions affect. Giving suburban county board members final authority over county zoning or establishment of single-member county board districts would improve accountability.

Also, suburbs within 1½ miles of proposed unincorporated developments should be given veto power over county zoning if the land involved is part of a comprehensive plan adopted by the suburb.

This would encourage annexation to suburban municipalities rather than random development in the county. It would also end the intolerable situation that allows developers to blackmail concessions out of suburbs by threatening to build a high-density project under county control if the suburb won't annex the site on the builder's terms.

EXAMPLES of county zoning include the 13-story Old Madrid apartment building, now located within Palatine. County Comrs. Floyd Fulle and Charles Bonk were indicted on charges in connection with county zoning for the construction of this project.

ALSO mentioned in the indictment was the Bay Colony condominium project, built as part of a 45-acre project located near University Street and Potter Road in Maine Township.

Daley's the big favorite tomorrow

He's 72—but he's still Hizzoner

by DAVID SMOTHERS
UPI Senior Editor

CHICAGO — Will Chicago, that toddling town, still toddle for Richard J. Daley?

Probably. But tomorrow he faces what amounts to an affront to his 20-year civic majesty.

Three candidates of real or potential strength oppose him in the Democratic mayoral primary. It is the first time since he first ran for mayor that Dick Daley has been called upon to face such effrontery in his own party.

Chicago, being what it is, he hardly ever had to worry about the Republicans on his way to an unprecedented five terms as mayor of the nation's second largest city, "the city which works," Daley loyalists aver, because Daley runs it.

Assuming he wins tomorrow, Daley probably will not have to worry about his sixth term, either. The only serious Republican in the race is an alderman who readily admits his main concern is being reelected to the City Council.

What must concern Daley are his Democratic challengers this week — a Gold Coast liberal alderman who learned at Daley's knee the necessity of building a political organization, a belligerent, Harvard-educated West Side Irishman who once carried Daley's fondest blessing; and a street-savvy state senator who is the first man to make a viable bid to become the first black mayor of this largely black city.

The probable order of finish tomorrow will be Daley, Alderman William S. Singer, former State's Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan and State Sen. Richard H. Newhouse Jr.

Singer might give Daley a scare and could conceivably win Newhouse's vote could be as significant. Chicago is roughly 45 per cent black and the time may not be far away when it has a black mayor. It was the black vote which toppled Hanrahan from office after he authorized a police raid in which police killed two leaders of the Black Panthers.

They are Daley's first challengers in a Democratic primary since 1955 because this is Daley's last time out and the old warrior is vulnerable at last — vulnerable, but far from washed up.

He may be 72. He may be recovering from a stroke which sent him into surgery and kept him out of the big office on the fifth floor at City Hall most of last summer.

It may be that some of Daley's closest aides and associates have been involved, many of them convicted, in 15 major scandals since he last ran for mayor. It may be that more than 50 Chicago police have gone to jail, most of them for shakedowns.

It may be the mayor himself is accused of using his power to throw lucrative city insurance business to two of his sons and to send the political career of another soaring.

It may be that some of Daley's best wishers had hoped he would not make this last run. It may be that for the first time in his reign none of the major Chicago newspapers which invariably supported him do so now.

RICHARD J. DALEY

Abortions criticized

I was flabbergasted at the number of women who would "certainly consider" an abortion, if told they carried a retarded child in their womb. More than half of the good number of women I have spoken with say that in this case it's "different" so automatically the cards are changed and an abortion is permissible in their thoughts.

What really eats me up is the fact that if that baby was going to be born normal, all those women would have those babies. My dear people, what is a baby? Is it something whom you will love and cherish, and build expectations for? Certainly. What is a retarded baby? Will you love and cherish, and build expectations for this child? Certainly, that is, if you have a healthy mind.

It is only when we begin to label things and people that we begin to confront each other with questions such as, "Is this right, am I with the norm?" That is where "retarded" has picked up its negative response, since it's sometimes considered "out of the norms." Some people are afraid of "retarded" because they tie "retarded" in with "negative" and the "negative" in with rejection. No person wants rejection, not even an animal. There is room for every person to do his thing. It has taken years for us to discover that women are equal to men. I only pray that it won't take us that long to discover that we are all equal to each other, regardless of race, religion, or I.Q.

Harper rocks as Muddy Waters flows on—and 'who do you love?'

by JOE SWICKARD

Say alright to the Northwest suburban boogie babies in jump time 'cause they want to get down with the Hootchie Kootchie Man.

Muddy Waters, AKA the Hootchie Kootchie Man, the King of the Blues, and born McKinley Morganfield, came to Harper College Friday night and he gave the kids what they wanted.

They wanted it loud and fast and they got it just like they saw him do it on Channel 11. He and his band were good and tight but unchallenging and almost predictable.

MUDDY AND the opening act, Mighty Joe Young, sold out the house at Harper. But it was the first act booked there in two years that did not sell out in advance.

The student center at Harper was just not designed for the blues. And those molded fiberglass chairs lined up in that stark and sterile pit scream out: "Institutional functional" — so easy to clean.

In the Harper setting the kids have to bring the atmosphere with them when they come. But all those faded flannel shirts and tattered denim have to work overtime to give the pit any semblance of warmth or humanity.

Filing past the door (don't forget to get your hand stamped) you enter the pit.

THE ANTICIPATION of Muddy and the Mighty Joe is dulled by the setting and the scurrying security people. Conversation is subdued by a nagging feeling that you're waiting for a school assembly to start.

Muddy, a major influence in music the is credited with electrifying rural blues to match the big city's hustling desperation, was apparently best known for his recent appearance on WTTW's Soundstage program.

"I wonder if he looks like he did or TV," was asked along with the price of his sound equipment. One guy said his mother wanted to come along after his exposure on educational television.

After enduring the usual bad harmonica renderings offered by a member or two of the audience, Mighty Joe Young and his band filled the stage.

MIGHTY JOE, a veteran of years of backing headliners and opening college concerts, knocked 'em dead with his outfit I mean a Waylon Jennings shirt with the embroidered roses was set off by hundreds of sparkle studs. His jeans had guitars twinkling on each leg.

The clothes looked like a testimonial to those stud-setter gizmos they push on late night television along with the bottle cutters and hand operated sewing machines.

Mighty Joe opened with a toned down "Ain't No Sunshine." As the set progressed, it became obvious he just ain't the same as when he can be so black and nasty in some smoky dive.

Always the professional, he kept glancing at his watch. He and the band cooked hard for the last 15 minutes and then wound it up — just about an hour on the nose.

INTERMISSION and the kids stoked up on potato chips and soft drinks from the snack bar. When the lights dimmed for Muddy the odor of whatever dope was being smoked was overpowered by the greasy scent of the chips.

Muddy's band hit the stage. They didn't mess around building up. They went right into it. The kids responded with uniform clapping — pro forma: both arms over-head.

Two rockers and then it was "show-time and by showtime I mean it's start-time." Muddy Waters, shouted Guitar Junior.

The boogie babies roared as Muddy took the stage and settled himself on a stool. Natty in a grey plaid suit and dark tie, he launched into "Hootchie Kootchie Man."

ALL THE mojos, black cat bones and John the Conqueror Stones sailed right on by with other mules kicking in his stall in his second number, "Long Distance Call."

He did not let up. As familiar and pat as the songs were, the grand old man just cannot be ignored. It's all so persuasive.

People walking the edges of the crowd didn't just walk. You have to strut your stuff and keep in time right along.

As always, Muddy had a superb band in the tradition of his former sidemen Little Walter, and Otis Spann. Not even when the house lights were suddenly raised (apparently as some crowd control measure) did they slacken beat.

Some of the older people in the audience with their children started filtering out after an hour. Yes, folks, the music is loud, so loud that it pounds you.

The music overwhelms the slab construction of the pit. It overflows because Muddy Waters is still willing to walk 47 miles of barbwire and he's always 22 and don't mind dyn' . . . tell me, who do you love?

Theirs are 'people jobs'

Like mother, like daughter

by BILLIE BACHMEYER

Jean Ulrich "puts people together and then gets out of the way to let beautiful things happen."

Jean and her eldest daughter, Jane, both recruit, interview and assign volunteer jobs, and also handle public relations and education information for health organizations. Both enjoy their jobs primarily because they like working with people.

Jean Ulrich coordinates volunteers and directs public relations at Americana Health Care Center in Arlington Heights. Jane Ulrich works for the American Cancer Society's Northwest Suburban Unit in Palatine.

Jane recently was promoted to executive director after working as a field representative for two and a half years. "Being with people and doing something worthwhile is very satisfying work," said Jane. "And watching the unit grow so rapidly is very exciting."

MRS. ULRICH echoes her daughter's feelings. The first paying job she's held since she married, working at Americana has been one of the most exciting years of her life, she said. "My greatest satisfaction is making things happen."

Not one to sit back and wait for things to happen, Jean first earned a degree in sociology and psychology at the University of Michigan. After graduation she worked as a service representative for the telephone company in Detroit. Then she joined the American Red Cross Overseas and Recreation Club, working two years in the Philippines, Okinawa and India.

"It was tremendously exciting! I wouldn't trade that experience for anything," she recalled.

JEAN TOOK another people job after returning to the states. She directed young adult activities at the YWCA in Saginaw, Mich., where she met husband Jim, who writes mathematics textbooks and heads the math department at Arlington High School.

After they married, Jean and Jim agreed that she would stay at home with the children. "I agreed it would be my job to impart our values to the children (Jane, Jim Jr., Judy and Joan, now all grown).

"I always felt that I earned half the paycheck with the work I did at home and I loved doing it!" she confided.

Jean believes that every job she performed in the past helps her in her new position. Rearing a family has enabled her to keep in touch and to work well with young volunteers at Americana. And keeping busy in the community — especially working at many levels in Girl Scouts — attending workshops, seminars and adult education classes all have helped reaffirm confidence in her ability to do a good job, she said.

"IF A WOMAN chooses to raise a family, she should do a good job, but she also should prepare to earn a living, or she might get the short end of the stick some day," is Jean's advice.

Jane buys her mother's reasoning. Planning first to teach, she earned a bachelor's in education at Northern Illinois University. However, while practicing teaching, she found that was not for her. So after college she tried working as a clerk-typist at Baxter Laboratories in Morton Grove, but soon applied for a job at the Cancer Society. Here she found her career niche.

"I really like the work. Mother's volunteering and concern for others may have influenced me," Jane reflected.

Concern for others is what volunteering is all about. Mother and daughter agree: it takes a very special kind of person to be an effective volunteer.

IN HER JOB at Americana, Mrs. Ulrich matches the needs of patients with the needs and abilities of volunteers. At present the center most needs friendly visitors: companions to read, write letters, deliver mail and push wheelchairs.

"In essence, patients need compassion, someone who cares," Jean said.

Patients themselves show that they care for others. At Americana they stamp Cancer Society literature as one of their service projects. And cancer patients help each other through such programs as Reach to Recovery, which has women who've recovered from mastectomies give support to those undergoing that surgery.

But isn't working or volunteering at a nursing home or for the Cancer Society depressing, you may ask. And Jean and Jane will immediately set you straight on that. Jane views her work as "challenging, fulfilling and enriching" because of the wonderful people she meets.

MORE OF THESE wonderful people are needed, Jane said, to distribute Cancer Society literature and work in the organization's service programs. The society's immediate goal is to make patients more comfortable through the service programs and the ultimate goal is to save lives through research, Jane explained. Through education, the public is made more aware of cancer, she said.

Because most of the persons with whom she works are older than she is, Jane has started a program for young singles called Positive Action for Cancer Elimination or PACE. Her plans call for enjoyable events for young suburbanites, with the proceeds going to the Cancer Society. And she hopes some of these young adults will become volunteers.

BOTH MOTHER and daughter like to read in their leisure time. At her Wheeling apartment, Jane enjoys writing and doing crafts, including candlemaking and leather work. Her favorite sport is tennis, and during winter months she and her father play every Sunday morning. She also likes to travel and has been to Europe twice and to Africa.

Right now Jean's social life has taken a backseat, but she does entertain at small dinner parties at her Arlington Heights home, the largest lately being a birthday party for her mother, Alta Luxan. About 35 relatives and friends came from all over the country to help Alta celebrate her 80th.

And what does Alta do? She addresses thousands of letters for the Cancer Society, types and mends for the family and helps out in the office of Arlington High School.

Volunteering seems to run in the family.

Brimmed hats dominate spring fashion picture

The yen for hats will be even greater this spring and summer with brims the focal point.

Brim sizes in widths from two inches to 10 or 12 inches, straight and dapper, floppy and face-hiding, slanted to the side or turned back off the brow dominated the designs in spring and summer showings.

Occasionally a brimless model slipped through, mainly for evening — crocheted helmets or satin turbans with a gala ostrich feather accent. But this year's Easter bonnet more likely will be a brimmed model.

AIRINESS IS THE look no matter what the brim size. Open-work, embroidery, starched fabrics, natural straws and horsehairs are the materials to look for.

Flowers, however, were crowded out of the picture by feathers in clusters or swept back over the crown of the hat.

One company, The Merry-makers, showed wide, uneven brimmed hats with cat and Indian faces painted on the front of the crown.

The expression "Where did you get that hat?" will come alive for spring. The hat has barely been seen for many a year, in fact. But in 1975 hats are going to the head of the accessory list.

ACCESSORIES IN general are big news for spring. With prices the least expensive way to liven up your wardrobes. There are many styles of shoulder bags in leather and fabric textures. Clutches with hidden chains convert to shoulder carrying. One of the newest purses is called the "Dachshund" because it is long and low in the shape of an elongated satchel.

Belts, too, run the gamut of widths, but the big show stopper is the sash and the wrapped or obi look.

Straw crops up all over for spring — in belts, jewelry, handbags. It is part of the natural trend for the season and works in well with the muted tones so prevalent in clothes now.

According to fashion sources, prices for spring accessories will remain relatively stable.

She's reluctant to say 'bye bye' to blackbirds

It's possible that by now the Army has finished the job. That is, their mission of spraying the millions of pesky blackbirds wintering in areas of Kentucky and Tennessee with a detergent that will dissolve the protective oil in the birds' feathers.

Naturally a lot of environmentalists are up in the air about this, having gone to court to try to legally prevent the spraying which will make the birds succumb to cold, wet weather. And a lot of farmers and residents near the roosting areas are happy that the pests will be gone.

It is hard to present a case for a blackbird. Blackbirds look dumb, walk funny and sound awful. However, I have a warm spot for them because, besides the sparrow, blackbirds are the only other kind that visit my yard.

ALL WINTER I have been feeding a bunch of them leftover bread. I must admit that instead of returning the pleasure of a bright wing or a beautiful call, all they do is wait on the telephone line and stare reproachfully at me through the kitchen window if I don't have the bread out by 10 a.m. Now, since I heard about the Army's plan for their southern brothers, I've tried to have the birds' food out by 9 o'clock because I can't handle the guilt their linear stares produce in me.

There's no question that the farmers have a real problem with these birds who devour their planting seed, and that the Army has to find ways to keep combat-ready in peacetime, but there is more than the environmentalist's reason for preserving the birds.

CONSIDER, based on this as a precedent, what could happen to the pigeons in St. Mark's Square. Alfred Hitchcock's movie and Dauphine DuMaurier's story on which it was based, would have to be retitled, "The Bird." People would have to line up to feed the pigeon in the park. Phrases like "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" and "Birds of a feather flock together" would lose all relevance. And "jail birds" and "stool pigeons" would become meaningless.

My husband tells me not to worry. He insists that if I keep throwing out the bread on time, our private collection of grackles won't fly South and meet a violent end. I know he is hoping they'll hang around and eat the spring grubs in our grass and save him the cost of an insecticide.

Furthermore, he adds, if I keep them happy, the day will come when our neighbors who now work so hard to attract Green Bottom Burbank Broadbills will wonder at our success in attracting the rarest bird of all.

A Mrs. Fixit for autos

by GAY PAULEY

Lucille Treganowan once intended to teach speech and English in high school or college. Circumstances changed her first ambition, however, and she became an automobile repairwoman.

Mrs. Treganowan, 44, is not your ordinary mechanic. She's a specialist in troubled transmissions in autos and as far as she can learn is the only woman so specializing and also owning the business — in Penn Hills, Pa., a Pittsburgh suburb.

"We're diagnosticians," said the native of Iola, Kan. "We do a complete analysis. Sort of like going to a doctor for a complete examination — before cutting."

"In this field, we get cars doing all sorts of wild things, when maybe the problem is something you can repair in five minutes, like a lock in one gear. I suppose some could be fixed with a bobby pin."

BUT THERE ARE times when a whole rebuilding is needed and Mrs. Treganowan and staff do this too. They also do a lot of "performance work" with race cars, mainly dragsters, and her firm sponsored two winners in local competition last year and will send out another this year.

Staff consists of Anne Walsh, who was graduated with a degree in fine arts from Wilson College, Chambersburg, Pa., but wanted work that didn't mean a routine eight-hour day; a 19-year-old son who's a jazz drummer as well as mechanic; and a son, 17, a high school senior who works after school hours, and four other men. Her daughter, 21, is not involved in the family business.

Mrs. Treganowan opened her mechanics center, "Transmissions by Lucille," 11 months ago after eight years as a partner with two men and 16 years all-told in the field.

Mrs. Treganowan was studying toward a teaching degree at the University of Arizona when she married a native of Pittsburgh. They moved East.

SHE SAID, "When I saw my marriage breaking up and me with three small children to care for, I took a clerical job with a garage. I also enrolled at the University of Pittsburgh. I now have five years of college, but because of credit transfer I still have a few hours to do before I get a degree."

Meanwhile, working at the auto shop, she studied mechanics. Ultimately, she became known as "the transmission lady" and other shops would call her for advice.

She named her own shop "Transmissions by Lucille" because her last name (she kept her married name after divorce) "simply was more than most people could manage. And I wanted some class, like a designer label on a dress."

She also wanted to keep the feminine image. Announcement of the opening of her business went out on pink stationery, she drives a burgundy and white car, and work clothes are usually pantsuits and shop coats — no mechanic's overalls "no matter how dirty Anne and I can get."

Their marriage took place Jan. 18 in St. Joseph's Church, Aston, the home of Christine's mother, Mrs. Francis Shields. Tony is the son of the Anthony A. Zovnic, Arlington Heights.

CHRISTINE chose her sister, Susanne Noah, Chester, Pa., as matron of honor for the 5:30 p.m. candlelight, double ring service. Bridesmaids were Susan Buckley, Chester, and the groom's sister, Betsy.

Thomas Zovnic, Arlington Heights, was his brother's best man, and ushers were Richard Johnston, Rolling Meadows, and the bride's brother-in-law, Eric Noah.

A reception for 85 guests was held at the Brandywine Terrace in Claymont, Del., after which the newlyweds honeymooned at the Tower Isle Hotel, Jamaica. They are now residing in a Palatine apartment.

Christine is a graduate of Temple University, Philadelphia, and Tony, a gradu-

Des Plaines girl married in a red and white wedding

A red and white color scheme filled St. Zachary Church, Des Plaines, for the Jan. 25 wedding of Kathleen Campopiano and Richard G. DiPrima. The bride included red roses in her bouquet; her attendants wore red velvet gowns trimmed in silver and carried red roses with white carnations.

Both the bride and groom work for Cintas Corp. in Arlington Heights. Kathleen is the daughter of the Robert Campopianos of Des Plaines and is a graduate of Forest View High School. Her husband, son of the Michael DiPrimas of Mount Prospect, graduated from Prospect High.

The couple exchanged vows and rings in an 11 a.m. ceremony and later greeted guests at a reception at Casa Royale, Des Plaines.

KATHLEEN CHOSE a white chiffon over satin gown with embroidered bodice, long chiffon sleeves and chapel train, and over it flowed a 12-foot veil held by a headpiece of embroidered petals. She carried white orchids with her red roses.

Jan Martin, Mount Prospect, served as maid of honor and Betty Doebler, Elk Grove Village, and Joyce Douglas, Mount Prospect, as bridesmaids.

There were three junior attendants who dressed individually but wore pink Garnet rose corsages. They were the couple's sisters — Carol and Mary Campopiano and Jackie DiPrima.

DAVE STEVENS, Mount Prospect, was Richard's best man, with brothers of the pair, Ron Campopiano and Michael DiPrima, as groomsmen.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Washington, D.C. for a week and are living in a Mount Prospect apartment.

Clean toy with cornstarch

Dear Dorothy: My little granddaughter is simply mad about a big, fuzzy, white monkey. When she gets tired and cross, the only thing that calms her down is "George." But "George" has gotten so dirty, I ache to clean it. The tag that came with it is long since gone. Is there a simple cleaning method I could use so the little girl won't be upset by a possible change in color? — Mrs. W. H. Broder

Any cleaning is bound to change the color some, so perhaps it would be wise to get the little one to "help" you in giving George a "bath." The longtime method for cleaning these plush animals is to rub in cornstarch and then brush it out — or to make a paste of water and cornstarch, rub it in, let dry, then brush out. These simple home remedies, as you can see, don't involve materials that might be harmful to the child fondling such a plaything.

Dear Dorothy: Do you know how to remove dried milk spots from wood furniture? — Mrs. C. H. Haas Dip the very finest steel wool (0000) into some paste wax, rub lightly and away goes the stain. Then rub with a dry cloth and polish. Ought to look as good as new.

Dear Dorothy: To answer your reader who wanted to know if candied fruit can be frozen, I'd like to point out that it will keep nicely for at least a year in the refrigerator. I bought six pounds a year ago to use this past holiday. — Mrs. Frank Holmes

Dear Dorothy: Next time you cook acorn squash and are ready to put it in the oven, give it a good dusting of curry powder. You won't believe what curry does to it! — Edna Rogers

by Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Can't catch her breath

Last winter I started having spells of not being able to get my breath. I thought I was dying. It only happens in the night when I am asleep. I jump out of bed gasping for my breath and my husband hits me on my back several times. Gradually I start getting my breath, little by little.

A few weeks ago I had a terrible spell and could not breathe. I thought I was a goner. That was the first spell in several months and about the sixth or seventh spell in a year.

My family doctor says it may be from nerves, but I don't agree with him as it only happens in my sleep. It's a terrible feeling not being able to get your breath.

Incidentally, I am 55 and I have high blood pressure, about 170, and I do take nerve pills.

I would like to know your opinion and what you think could be the cause.

Your story sounds like paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea. What does that mean? Recurrent bouts of not being able to get your breath at night. And, if it is so, it is important.

Sometimes it is difficult to separate this problem from apparent breathlessness associated with anxiety. Occasionally a person may have a nightmare or be anxious, then awake, and overbreathe, a condition called hyperventilation. However, the symptoms are a bit different and your doctor should be able to separate them.

Small blood clots to the lungs can cause breathlessness, but this doesn't occur repeatedly just at night. Also nervousness causing breathlessness usually doesn't occur just at night a few hours after going to sleep.

The classical case of paroxysmal nocturnal dyspnea is as you described it. The person will go to bed with no symptoms at all. Several hours after going to sleep, the patient will awaken with the breathless attack. As the attack subsides, the person can lie down again and go to sleep for the rest of the night without trouble. Then when the doctor sees the patient there is nothing to see or hear. The lungs are clear and there is nothing but the story.

THESE EPISODES commonly occur in people who have some disease involving the left side of the heart. High blood pressure is such a disease. Individuals with high blood pressure who begin to have some weakening of the heart from the overload of pressure may develop such attacks.

The actual breathlessness is caused by the accumulation of a small amount of fluid in the lungs after you have been lying down. An X-ray taken immediately after the attack may show diffuse increased fluid in the lungs. The attacks are somewhat like a severe asthmatic attack. Some of the medicines used in asthmatics are useful, but some of these are avoided because of the associated heart condition.

Often the problem will respond to one of the digitalis medicines. By strengthening the heart muscle with digitalis the accumulation of the small amount of fluid in the lungs doesn't occur and the attacks disappear. Since you already have high blood pressure I would certainly give this serious consideration in view of your history.

Address your questions in care of this column to Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 230, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006.

Towns may fight ouster from municipal conference

Several municipalities may fight a proposal to oust them from the Northwest Municipal Conference, which is made up of 16 communities in the Northwest suburbs.

A full-scale plan to develop a stronger conference was proposed by Palatine Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones, but his plan includes elimination of seven communities from the conference.

Des Plaines is among the municipalities Jones would trim from the rolls, and Mayor Herbert H. Behrel said Thursday, "I want to know why he is suggesting that. What's wrong with what we've got now?"

Part of the issue is a proposal to fund a full-time director for the conference. A full-time staff position would require large donations from each member community, and some have balked at such a plan. Behrel said Des Plaines supports the concept and probably will vote to reject its share of a refund from a previous conference, transit study so the money can be used for a director.

MOST MAYORS and village presidents who would be affected by the change were not at last week's meeting to comment. Elk Grove Village Pres. Charles Zetek, president of the conference, said he would oppose eliminating members. An unofficial spokesman for one of the communities said, "It sounds like a kick in the teeth, doesn't it?"

Jones indicated later that his proposal included drastic changes because he wants to stimulate the members to take some action. "This area sends $300 million to the federal government in income taxes each year and I don't think we're getting our fair share because we're not organized," he said. The proposal could be changed before it comes to a vote.

Jones would prefer a legal agreement requiring an annual financial contribution based on the size of each member community. With that fund, proposed at 20 cents per year for each person in a municipality, a working system could be established and priority goals could be sought, Jones said.

SUGGESTED PRIORITIES include public safety, regional cooperation, environmental quality and transportation.

Jones said the new group of nine communities would be called Northwest Area Council of Governments and would have a definite executive structure that would include mayors, presidents and managers of each community.

Jones' plan would include Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Wheeling, Mount Prospect, Elk Grove Village, Hoffman Estates, Palatine, Rolling Meadows and Schaumburg. Communities to be cut under the plan would be Des Plaines, Park Ridge, Niles, Streamwood, Hanover Park, Barrington and Inverness.

Won't raise tuition from $550

Sacred Heart to seek $120,000 subsidy

Sacred Heart of Mary High School in Rolling Meadows again will ask the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago to subsidize the school during the 1975-76 school year.

The school will ask for a $120,000 subsidy, or about $200 per student and will not raise the tuition fee of $550.

"The tuition, fees and other income will produce $617 per student next year," said the Rev. James Michaletz, superintendent of the school. "However, the cost to educate each student will be $1,100. We hope the Archdiocese will continue to subsidize us for at least $120,000 . . . but we will need an additional $300 per student to provide the many programs that we feel are essential to quality education."

The school will continue a financial pledge program to supplement revenue to the school. The program was started last year and parents of students pledged more than $90,000 to help make the high school financially independent.

The pledge is voluntary and tax deductible, said Father Michaletz.

SACRED HEART nearly closed four years ago when the Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Mary order, facing a $45,000 deficit, put the school up for sale.

High School Dist. 214 refused to purchase the building and the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago bought the school. The archdiocese has been subsidizing the school since.

The policy of the archdiocese is that Catholic schools in the suburban areas are expected to take care of themselves financially. Of the 10 high schools subsidized by the archdiocese, Sacred Heart is the only one in the suburbs.

In 1973 Sacred Heart received a $200,000 subsidy or about $370 per student; last year it received a subsidy of $150,000 or about $260 per student.

The pledge program will be explained to parents at two meetings at the school, 2800 Central Rd., Rolling Meadows, Thursday and March 10. The meetings will begin at 8 p.m.

Zoo-display accent on deer

An 8-inch tall Malayan barking deer is to be among the animals in a zoo display through March 2 at the Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

The Deer Farm of Twin Falls, Idaho, will present many varieties of deer. The barking deer is only 6 months old and at maturity will be no larger than 14 inches tall.

The display includes 30 deer ranging from a young German red deer to a Japanese Sika deer. Children may pet, play with and feed the deer in an enclosure in the west wing of the shopping center. Admission is 35 cents. For organized school and scout groups the price is 25 cents.

To avoid scheduling conflicts, organized groups should call the shopping center management office at 882-1537.

Rubin's bold play books slam

Jim: "One test of a really great player is that he is willing to trust his own judgment at the risk of looking silly, if the judgment turns out to be wrong."

Oswald: "Ira Rubin of New York is one player who is certainly willing to do this. Here is one of his hands to illustrate. He won the diamond lead and started off spades. East discarded the four of clubs on the second spade and Ira huddled for some time."

Jim: "Ira's huddles are likely to be productive. I assume he decided that East's club discard indicated five clubs."

Oswald: "He certainly did. Then he proceeded to play the whole hand on that assumption."

Jim: "He must have started by running all his trumps, and discarding a heart and two diamonds from dummy."

Oswald: "This produced a six-card ending with East hanging on to four clubs and two hearts. Now Ira cashed his last diamond and East had to chuck a heart to keep his four clubs. Ira cashed dummy's ace of hearts, led a club to his king and another club to dummy's seven to end play East."

Herald carriers enjoy a winter wonderland!

Forty Herald newspaper carriers made their fifth annual trip to Woodside Ranch in Mauston, Wisconsin the weekend of Jan. 3. A four-hour bus ride put the carriers in touch with a world of winter fun. There was skiing for the experienced as well as the novice, ice skating and horseback riding. Carriers were even able to drive their own snowmobiles! And there was plenty of good food to give the carriers strength to enjoy the fun. All in all, it was a weekend to remember for all the Herald carriers.

St. Viator's swimmers rule district meet

Swimming Editor
Saturday afternoon hung gray and misty. Now, through the vast Olympic Pool windows, anyone who cared could watch that final, horrible lightset of Central Standard Time.

"I've tired," stated the young lady from Arlington whose pencil helped qualify four relay teams plus nearly two dozen swimmers for state high school finals which begin Friday at New Trier East.

Her best pencilwork was done for Arlington's Joe Nitch who emerged the only double winner, taking IHSA district honors in 200 and 500 freestyles over Hersey's Chris Tague.

This Arlington swim district survived its strange moments. The kyroscope, that genius timer which sees and knows all, began to choke after just three events, once missing a clocking by nine seconds.

It blew lane five times so often that many placings were determined by its much more attractive back-ups, high school girls holding stopwatches.

"You can plan and plan, but when electronics break down, you're helpless," said Arlington coach Don Andersen whose Cards were not helpless but lost district team honors, 212-208, to a tough bunch from St. Viator.

As all these things were happening, which included great relay efforts from Prospect in medley plus Viator in freestyle, it became time for the slow heats of 500 freestyle which are very much like diving.

Diving is not swimming because it stops at the water. Many spectators retreat toward snack bars and washrooms whenever scantily clad young men approach the diving boards.

This might also happen during 500 freestyle slow heats when a person can leisurely stroll around the block, confident he will miss nothing.

Sitting where he could avoid the excruciating boredom, Viator coach John Fleck allowed that he was disappointed in the Lions' medley relay squad which placed second.

Mark Nelles, Mark Rusche, Dan

Peonski and Mark Rohl did qualify for state by swimming 1:45.4, but they were no match for Prospect which blew home nearly two seconds quicker.

Prospect's Chris Prinslow, Tom Cole, Brad Busse and Gary Eichhorst stunned the capacity crowd in 1:43.8, almost a three second improvement. Arlington qualified third, 1:45.8.

Not to let anyone mention "Fluke," Prinslow returned for victory in backstroke, 56.8, and Busse won breaststroke, 1:04.8. Both are really great times.

None of this made Fleck any happier. But he would soon feel better if Dan Peonski and Steve Myers dropped below five minutes in 500 freestyle whenever those slow heats ended.

But he would be disappointed again. Even though Peonski (5:04.3) and Myers (5:05.1) placed three-four to qualify for state finals, they couldn't meet Fleck's announced goal.

And it was small consolation that Viator led Arlington, 148-144, after 500 freestyle. The margin increased to four points when Viator placed Nelles second, 58.2, ahead to the Cards' Rob Carsiens, 58.9, in backstroke.

Then any breathing room Fleck wanted disappeared when Steve Rogers disqualified in breaststroke. His 1:07.4 would have given Viator nine points for sixth. They already had 11 from Rusche who finished fourth.

With Rogers out, Arlington's Kiernan

Hersey gymnasts roll to district honors; host Wheeling in 2nd spot

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Gymnastics Editor

There were no surprises at Wheeling Saturday night as the Hersey Huskies piled up 176 team points to win the Wheeling District gymnastics title by 116 points over the second place Wildcats.

Barrington took third place with 49 points, Palatine was third at 41, Fremd fourth with 26 and Rockford-Guilford brought up the rear with 24.5 points.

Hersey gave an indication of what kind of night it was going to be for the rest of the field when they took four of the top five places in the free exercise event as only Wheeling's Bill McGeshick could break into the medalist group with a 7.50 routine, good for fifth place.

Danny Muenz began the avalanche of medal winning performances as he captured fourth place with a 7.65 score, just .10 of a point below Bob Barut, in third place. Kevin Muenz took the second place medal with a 7.90 and far ahead of him, in the driver's seat, was Keith Oehlsson, who posted an 8.75 score.

Wheeling's Jim Geske and Jeff Kee made slight inroads into Hersey's domination of the side horse event as they sandwiched the Huskies with fifth and first place medals.

Geske took the fifth place award with a 6.7 routine and Kee became the only non-Huskie to win an event championship as he edged out runner Kevin Muenz by .05 of a point with an 8.10 mark.

Trailing Muenz was Jeff Salcedo in third place at 7.85 and brother Danny in fourth at 7.00.

Hersey had a simple 1-2-3 finish on the high bar as Danny Muenz took the event title with an 8.15 score. Kevin Muenz followed in second place at 7.85 and Brian Covelli took third at 7.70.

Rockford Guilford picked up nearly all their points on the trampoline as they placed men in the runner-up and fifth place slots while Barrington hauled down a third place medal. But the championship belonged to Mike Kropp, who had won the Mid-Suburban League title a week earlier, with an 8.65 score. Gregg Manning picked up a fourth place medal with an 8.65 mark.

Kevin Muenz put the lock on the all-around title when he won the P-Bars event with an 8.40 routine. Teammates Rich Stange and Danny Muenz tied for the second place award but they weren't in Muenz's ballpark with marks of 7.85.

Brian Covelli and Mike Caruso increased the Hersey whammy as they finished third and fourth respectively with judgings of 7.65 and 6.90.

Fremd's Doug Smidt, who competed on the sophomore level of the conference meet, picked up the first of two medals as he took a fifth on the P-Bars with a 6.65 score. He also placed third in the all-around with an average of 6.23.

Only Dale Brungaber, of Wheeling, was equal to the task of keeping Hersey from sweeping all five places on the still rings but with the benefit of ties the Huskies were still able to get their top five performers onto the medalist platform.

Brungaber topped all but four of the Huskie entrants with an 8.00 routine but wasn't solid enough to shake Vince Corrado out of the winner's perch. Corrado muscled to an 8.45 score.

Blaine Voss and Kevin Muenz fought it out for third place with Voss taking the decision by a slim 77 to 76.5 margin. Danny Muenz and Steve Cory came out in fifth place with identical 7.55 markings.

Palatine's only medal of the night came from Bob Garland, who averaged 4.54 for his all-around showing and received a fourth place medal for his troubles.

The Muenz brothers repeated their act of a week before when they handled the MSL's best all-arounders for a 1-2 finish.

more people became acquainted with him as he won the P-Bars championship with a 7.65 mark. (Photo by Dave Tonge)

Area sends 12 wrestlers to Illinois state finals

by KEITH REINHARD

Wrestling Editor

Hersey and Maine West each will be represented three times at the state wrestling championship finals in Champaign this weekend.

The Huskies came up with a pair of champions while charging to a second place team finish at the West Leyden Sectional. Hersey and the Warriors produced exactly half of the 12 qualifiers who will wear area colors at the Illinois High School Association showdown at the University of Illinois Assembly Hall Friday and Saturday.

Buffalo Grove advanced two grapplers while Elk Grove, Rolling Meadows, Forest View and St. Viator produced one apiece.

The number of qualifiers was somewhat of a disappointment in light of the record 54 local matmen who battled their way through district tournaments into the sectionals at three Northern Illinois sites.

But sectional meets at Rockford, Boylan, Leyden and especially Naperville took heavy tolls.

The only area qualifier at Naperville was defending state champ Rick Morris of Elk Grove.

In Rockford, Buffalo Grove's Terry

McCann and Rich Wilhelm forged second place finishes.

Hersey winners were Mark Furlong and Eric Strutz, while teammate Gary Hodge worked his way up through the wrestlebacks to snag a second place windup. Maine West had three runners-up, Bryan Real, Brad Bonmivier and Roger Herrera.

Also winning individual championships at West Leyden were Falcon John Gross, Mustang Roy Carlstrom and Lion Scott Zettek.

Hersey collected 39 team points and Maine West had 31 to finish two-three behind powerful East Leyden at the West Leyden meet. Forest View meanwhile tied with Gordon Tech in fifth place.

The Bison placed eighth at Rockford while Rockford East was capturing team laurels. Naperville emerged on top at their own meet while the Grenadiers were finishing ninth.

Morris was impressive in annexing the 138-pound title at the Redskin gathering. He topped Wheaton Central's Ralph McCausland 6-3 in the finals, clearly dominating the match.

Green Leo Montemayor was not as fortunate however. The returning state runner-up wrestled back into the consolation finals at 155 after dropping his opening bout but was stopped then by Ron Johns of Naperville and had to settle for fourth. Another victim who had been down state last year was Terry Ruddy of Schaumburg. The 105-pound vet lost out in the semis.

McCann lost his Rockford championship bout at 98 pounds, 11-3 to Kevin Kick of Mundelein. Wilhelm dropped a disputed 5-4 decision in the 119 finals to Dave Palmemo of Rockford East and then had to defend his runnerup berth by fending off Ray Overby of Warren on a referee's decision.

Wheeling's Ed Wargo (185) lost in the semifinals but rallied in the wrestlebacks for a third place windup.

Furlong, at 138, retained his unbeaten slate by rallying in the championship bout from a 6-1 first period deficit at the hands of Evanston's Tony Engel. He went on to polish off Engel 11-8 for a return trip to Champaign.

Strutz topped off another area entry, Herrera, to reign at 145 by a 4-2 count. Herrera subsequently turned back Falcon Tom Andersen to remain in second place.

Hodge lost in the semis at 167 but came up through the consolation bracket

Let's look at positive side

I never met a coach I didn't like.

No, Will Rogers didn't exactly coin the phrase that way.

And yes, I have to admit that if I were to comb some of the deeper, darker recesses of my memory, surely I'd recall one who produced some bad vibrations.

The point is that quite likely because of my own related profession, I have a very deep and genuine respect for those gentlemen who athletically guide the high school-age youth of the area. And in light of several negative incidents recently . . . incidents prompted by spectators . . . it seemed only proper to speak out in their behalf.

"An occupational hazard," is the way one coach philosophically shrugged the whole business off. Another, who worked downstate for many years before moving into this region sighed, "I came up here to get away from all those verbal cynics in the stands. I guess their bawling is a universal practice though."

Just about everybody has a theory about strategy. And sounding off at the old ball game is as American as apple pie. It's what those fans are entitled to with the price of admission. My argument isn't against the idea of making noise, but the aim and seriousness of it. When going out to that game ceases to be fun, it's time in my book that spectators to take up stamp collecting or watching the soap operas on TV.

Dick Kinneman has had an opportunity to look at prep sports from several excellent vantage points. He was a successful coach for many years, then just as successful an athletic director, and presently is coordinator for athletics in District 214. He sits up in the stands now too.

"When fans start getting critical about coaches, they're usually emotionally upset," Kinneman pointed out. "They're not really taking the time to look at the situation objectively."

He feels the problem probably wouldn't arise at all if the critic would bear in mind some of the other facets of coaching. "Too many of them only credit the coach for teaching his sport and pin his total ability to the win-loss column. It's not a very fair analysis."

Another outstanding former area coach who recently moved up into an athletic director's chair. Al Ratcliff, added, "Fans have a tendency too, of believing that coaching is all these guys do. I don't think they realize that this is an extra burden assumed by someone who teaches math or science or physical education during the day. It's an extra job only I haven't met a coach yet who's in it for the money."

The fact is, a school teacher can work for far greater financial gain and for far less grief by driving a taxi or selling real estate after hours. By conservative estimate, a head football coach in Dist. 211 peaks out at about $4 an hour for his tolls. A basketball mentor in 214 hits a top level of about $3.75. That's the ceiling . . . the ultimate he can work up to. Most coaches ply their trade for considerably less.

"That's just in season too," Ratcliff pointed out. "The figure comes down quite a bit if you want to start figuring in the time spent at clinics and reading up and researching your special sport. It's an absolute necessity if you want to remain competitive."

Added Kinneman: "It would also be impossible to pin down the extra hours all year long that a coach spends counseling his players and former players on subjects far removed from athletics. But this is what it's really all about anyway . . . teaching citizenship."

To which this writer can only add . . . Amen. For a long time now I've been an open advocate of positive spectatorship. That is, going out to a high school athletic contest and looking for the good things the youngsters do. If one team gets clobbered 100-1, true they must have played poorly, but on the other hand the winning side must have played magnificently.

The logic behind this positive approach is time-worn but never trite. The kids are playing because they want to, because they love the competitiveness of it, not because of a five-year, no cut, five million dollar contract. Not one in a thousand of these athletes will ever reach that stage of the game.

And now it's time to remind everyone that our coaches around here fall into the same bag. Sure they want to win. Possibly more than any charge they send out onto the field and surely more than every voice in the stands.

But Dick Mottas or Walt Alstons or Tom Landrys they're not. They're in the business principally because they enjoy working with youth and all the enthusiasm and competitiveness that's associated with it. If their success is to be measured at all, it would be in the number of young men who graduate from their ranks into solid members of society.

By that standard we have nothing but winners around here.

LaGrange tips Prospect; Palatine rolls to 62-47 win

A Herald Staff Report

Prospect experienced one of its poorest shooting nights of the season Saturday and state-ranked LaGrange capitalized on the weakness for a 51-41 triumph.

Connecting on a paltry 30 per cent of its attempts from the field, Prospect couldn't complement its sparkling defensive effort with any consistent scoring punch.

With the game still a two-point affair with just over two minutes remaining, LaGrange employed an infrequent stall to force the Knights out of their effective 2-3 zone defense. Prospect relied on fouls to obtain possession, but Lyons put the game out of reach on crucial free throw conversions down the stretch.

In running its record to 20-3, LaGrange accomplished the victory without the team's leading scorer Derky Robinson enjoying a big night. Robinson was handcuffed to just seven points as Knight guards Al Black and Mike Quade formed a picket fence at the top of the circle.

Prospect's Doug Bonthron got into early foul trouble and sat out nearly two and one-half quarters, but reserve forward Ted Reynolds came off the bench and did a fine job.

Dave Carroll of LaGrange pumped the Lions into a 13-8 first-quarter advantage as the winners hit six of 10 from the floor. Carroll notched 16 by the intermission but Prospect rallied to cut the deficit to 27-25.

Reynolds put the clamps on Carroll, holding him to just four points in the final 10 minutes, and the Knights kept chipping away — trailing just 36-38 after three periods before assuming a 44-42 lead at the five minute mark.

But the LaGrange freeze, coupled with continued cold shooting by the Knights left the outcome at the charity stripe where the Lions succeeded in icing the verdict.

Quade paced the 16-4 Knights in scoring with 10 while Black and Paul Withey contributed nine apiece. Dave Mann and Reynolds six each and Bonthron four.

PALATINE WINS, 62-47

There wasn't anything fancy about the way Palatine handled Riverside-

Brookfield Saturday night, but Pirate coach Ron Fintrock saw much to be pleased about in the 62-47 victory.

"We've really played well the last couple of nights," said Fintrock, whose Palatine Cagers nearly upset Wheeling Friday. "We've improved immensely."

One of the prime ingredients in the Pirates' nonconference win at Palatine was 5-foot-9 guard Tom Iorio, who directed his team's four-forward offense with the poise and execution his coach expects.

"When Iorio settles down, the rest of the boys settle down," Fintrock said. "He's what we need — someone to run the offense."

Palatine's high-scoring Mark Mara got the Pirates off to a flying start against the R-B Bulldogs, the last-place team in the West Suburban League. Mara, a 6-5 senior, had nine points in the first quarter as the Pirates jumped out to a 17-10 lead with two minutes left. Palatine never trailed in the contest.

But Mara picked up his third foul early in the second period and spent much of the rest of the game on the bench, still finishing with high-point honors at 15.

With Mara out of action, the Pirates relied on sophomore Kevin McKenna, who had 14 points on seven baskets, and Art Stevenson, the leading rebounder with eight. Two other important cogs in the Palatine machine were Jim Maycan and Ken Reid. Maycan, the husky 6-3 senior, grabbed seven rebounds and added eight points. Reid, the Pirates' 6-4 super sub, notched 12 points and hauled down five rebounds.

Hot shooting from the baseline by McKenna at the start of the second half helped build the Palatine margin, which stood at 36-33 before Fintrock went to his bench. Also a factor was the extremely cold shooting of the Bulldogs, who clicked on just 26 per cent of their field-goal tries in the game.

The Pirates, now 9-11 on the season, will face Rolling Meadows in the Mid-Suburban League crossover game on Tuesday before preparing for the regional tournament they will host starting Mar. 3.

R-B's top scorer was sophomore John Gronks with 13 points.

Kevin brought home the first place award with a 7.97 average while Danny was close behind at 7.64.

The first hurdle has been passed now for Hersey on their journey toward defending their state championship. Their next test, and it should be more a contest than the district proved to be, will come in the Buffalo Grove Sectional.

The Niles North District Friday night was the stomping ground of the Elk Grove Greasers but for their efforts they will be awarded a spot in, perhaps, the toughest sectional of the four, to be staged at Niles West.

The Greys won their district title on a balanced team showing with a special emphasis on the high bar, where they piled up 27.5 points, more than any other team compiled on any one event.

Elk Grove managed this on the strength of medal winning performances by Tom Bulha (second, 8.25), Matt Dam-ero (tied for third, 8.10) and Gene Christensen (first, 8.60).

Niles North, the eventual runner up team, threw a first rate scare into Elk Grove on the opening event as they out-scored the Greys 24 to 14 on free exercise. Elk Grove got a third place finish from Christensen (8.30) and Damoro (7.95) but had nobody else in the top 10 while Niles North placed four men up in the ranks where the points are counted.

A 20 point performance on the side horse began to pull Elk Grove out of the hole. Tim Connolly led the charge with an 8.60 routine that took the event championship by more than half a point.

The side horse was the one bright spot of the night for Maine West, who finished fifth in the team standings with 20 points. Eight of these came on the horse where Neil Sordian copped a third place medal with a 7.95 score.

The Forest View Falcons sent Bob Walsh on to the sectionals on the trampoline. Walsh's 7.55 was good enough for fifth place. The only other team points the Falcons scraped together came from John Scoll's 7.60 in free ex, good for eighth place.

Hoffman cagers fall

If Hoffman Estates could have had an other quarter like its first, it might have been quite a game.

The Hawks had plenty of trouble after taking the opening period, 20-13, at Glenbrook South. Their hosts pulled ahead after the first half and then rolled to a 71-45 victory.

Gene Foster, who received praise from Coach Jerry Segobrecht, finished as the team leader in both points (16) and rebounds (8). Most of his points came in the first half.

Pressure play by South forced Hoffman into many mistakes.

Jeff Curtin had eight points and Joe Gajewski tossed in seven.

It was Hoffman's ninth loss in as many varsity starts. The Hawks' last chance to register a win will be in the Palatine Regional against Conant.

Rolling Meadows Hockey

Rolling Meadows Warriors 4, Deerfield 1

Back to North Suburban Hockey League action, the Warriors played well on defense. Pat Brunory, just Smith, Greg Kowalewski, Doug Ryan all had a good game. The Warriors scored four times. Bill Colacello got the first and second goals assisted by linemates Scott Sanders and John Peszek; the second assisted by Scott Sanders and Greg Kowalewski. Scott Sanders scored next assisted by Kurt Smith. Bill Schroll ended the scoring assisted by Joel Basgall.

Rolling Meadows Warriors 3, Niles 3

The Warriors lead twice in another North Suburban Hockey League game first at 1-0 and later 3-1 but had to settle for a tie as Niles scored with only 30 seconds left to play. Scoring for the Warriors were Scott Sanders twice assisted by Pat Brunory on the first and Bill Colacello on the second. Ricky Perillo finished the scoring assisted by Kurt Smith.

Rolling Meadows Warriors 3, Aurora Flyers 2

In a game that was played at Rolling Meadows both teams excited the crowd with their skating and checking ability. Each team scored once in the first period. The second period was a standoff. The Flyers scored first in the third period, but the Warriors came back with two goals to pull the game out 3-2. Scoring for the Warriors were Scott Sanders assisted by John Peszek and Greg Kowalewski. Scott also scored the second goal assisted by Joel Basgall. Eric Orinhu ended the scoring assisted by Greg Kowalewski.

Where is justice?

Maine East came close to pulling off a legitimate upset on Saturday evening, but the Blue Demons' bid for victory fell short, losing 48-45 to New Trier West.

It ended a frustrating weekend that saw the Demons lose to Highland Park on Friday, 67-60.

Blue Demon coach Paul McClelland, standing outside his team's understandably somber locker room, reflected upon "what might have been" for his struggling club (winless in seven weeks). Even the most casual observer had to sense the sting of this latest setback in a long 6-17 season.

"You wait all year long for the big one; getting a good team down and upsetting them," agonized McClelland. "We had New Trier West down, yes we did, but we let them slip off the hook. It's really tough for the kids to take."

Despite their own problems on offense, the Blue Demons were able to stay close to NTW throughout the second quarter, and trailed by only three at the half, 20-17.

The third quarter belonged to Maine East, and had the Demons been able to maintain their momentum in the final stanza, things might have been different. Clark and teammates Mark Berns and Charlie Sallergren led a Maine East spurt which put the Blue Demons on top, 34-30, after three quarters.

What ever complacency or confusion beset the favored visitors, be they CSL North Division leaders or not, they were rudely awakened to the fact that they were "in a game", and had best take their opponents seriously. That apparent attitude change, coupled with some bad breaks for the Blue Demons, proved to be turning point in the final quarter, and consequently, in the game.

New Trier trailed 36-30, when East's Derrick Brown missed the first of a one and one situation. The Cowboys scored 8 points to tie the score at 38-38. It would be deadlocked on two more occasions, before six straight foul shots would give NTW a 48-42 lead with 42 seconds remaining in the contest. A late rush by the Demons was not enough, as several seemingly good shots refused to drop.

The Maine East Demons buried themselves in last place of the North Division of the Central Suburban League being chopped down by the Giants of Highland Park, 67-60, on the Demons home court.

Highland Park ran its league record to 4-9 by overcoming an early Demon lead in the first period on the strength of a 15-point first half performance by 6'-8" senior center Rich Schwalbach.

Shadowing the style of Bill Walton, Schwalbach blocked seven shots on the night and "owned" the middle on defense while sharing game honors of 20 points with Maine East's Mark Maloney.

The Demons held a two point lead at the end of the first period but had to rely on erratic outside shooting the rest of the way due to the strong play in the middle by Schwalbach and Mike Arcus of Highland Park.

The Demons made a strong bid in the third quarter as Mark Maloney got hot and pulled his team within two of the Giants, 49-47, entering the final period.

The roof fell in on the Demons during the final period bringing about their own disaster shooting only 16 per cent down the stretch. They stayed close on the strength of free throws but were unable to get the big buckets they needed.

Highland Park shot a steady 50 per cent from the floor in both halves while the Demons, despite the horrid fourth period, shot a respectable 42 per cent.

The Giants held the edge in rebounding 28-20 and in free throws 65 per cent to 50 per cent which made the difference in the game. Maine East's record falls to 2-10 in league play and 6-16 overall.

Wheeling's girls top invitational

LOOKING FOR HELP is Conant's Linda Webb as Wheeling's Sandy Rainey puts on the pressure Saturday. Rainey led her Wildcat team to a fourth place state finish.

by PAUL LOGAN
Wheeling's first invitational basketball tournament was decided in the third quarter. The Wildcats of Coach Donna Dubbelde led just 28-19 heading into that period. After the first four minutes had elapsed, the 'Cats had built their margin to 38-19 over Conant.

Wheeling enjoyed as much as a 27-point lead early in the fourth quarter en route to a 58-38 victory. And so the first of possibly many trophies will go into the awards case.

Providing much of the firepower in both games of the four-team, one-day tournament was Sandy Rainey. The 5-foot-9 freshman scored 12 points against Conant and 18 in the first game against Glenbrook North.

Rainey was also the top rebounder in both games with a total of 14.

The Wildcats blitzed Conant in the first period, outscoring the Cougars 18-3. Two other Wheeling players were in double figures — LucAnn Paulsen, who tied Rainey for scoring honors, with 12 and Carol Magnus with 10.

Also scoring in the championship game for the winners were three girls with six points each — Sandy Phillip, Mary Meyer and Ann Kearns.

Kathy Evans poured in 16 points and pulled down 23 rebounds to pace Conant. Linda Webb had 10 points and 13 boards and Kathy Reynolds had eight rebounds.

St. Viator swimmers top district meet

Mock was fifth and Mike Roessler sixth. The Cards outscored Viator, 19-11, in breaststroke and now led, 185-100, with one event remaining.

Everyone who'd seen splits or followed these kids knew there wasn't an ice cube's chance in damnation of anybody staying with Viator during freestyle relay.

But if you're John Fleck, who's just seen his medley relay finish second, then two top-notch swimmers miss his announced goal and another gets disqualified, maybe you're not so sure.

No problems here, though. Viator's Nelles, Jon Newcomer, Dan Peonski and Rohl swam a brilliant 3:24.4 freestyle relay to win by five seconds over Hershey and seven over Arlington.

Outgoing Arlington, 32-24, in that last relay gave Viator a second consecutive district title. The Lions won last season at Highland Park enroute to a fourth place state finish.

Viator's other winning points Saturday were by sophomore Rohl in 100 freestyle, 50-1.

Arlington won three events as Nitch got both long frees from Tague and Dixon. O'Brien took individual medley, 2:08.9.

Nitch continued a domination of Tague that has seen him capture five-of-six swims in 200 or 500 frees this season. He's got three wins in the shorter distance.

Their times Saturday were Nitch 1:47.6 and Tague 1:50.1 in 200 plus Nitch 4:52.8 and Tague 4:54.2 in the long event.

Hershey grabbed the only on-two performance behind divers Jeff Speakman, 386.95, and Bill Cashmore, 382.15. Both marks were higher than at Mid-Suburban League championships when Cashmore won.

A supposed title contender, Hershey just didn't show it Saturday and placed third in 162. Prospect was fourth, 146.

Balance showed in many events. But-terfly and 500 free produced four state qualifiers apiece as did diving which gets an automatic four. Medley relay, 200 free and backstroke each advanced three qualifiers.

Fifty-yard freestyle produced an interesting statistic. Only winner Tim Hunt of Elgin advanced, but 10 swimmers were less than nine-tenths off state qualifying 23.4.

Douglas McConnell gave Dundee its only win, 54.4 in butterfly.

Five swimmers missed reaching state finals by less than one second. They were Viator's Rogers in individual medley, Hershey's John Siller and Buffalo Grove's Mike Foley in butterfly, Prospect's Spencer Gilchrist in backstroke and Viator's Rusche in breaststroke.

Elsewhere, Elk Grove's Brent Bolln won individual medley and butterfly while Maine East diver Chris Dickson placed first at the Glenbrook South district.

Bolln won butterfly in 56.6 and I.M. in 2:06.9. Dickson scored a super 440.75 in diving for Maine East.

Maine North received wins from John Monaghan in 50 and 100 freestyles, 23.4 and 50.1. Maine West and Forest View did not advance any swimmers past the GBS district, the same fate being sustained by Wheeling at New Trier West.

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Frenk Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Township hires extra help

Public-aid applicants increase threefold

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Ninety persons a month, many of them laid-off waitresses, truck drivers and factory workers, are walking into the Wheeling Township Hall and asking for help to pay the bills.

The 90 new monthly cases represents a significant increase in township general assistance applications — only 30 new applications were made each month last summer — and has caused the township to hire an additional caseworker.

Jane Klatt, the township's social services director, was hired in June because of the rapidly increasing general assistance program.

The township hired another full-time case worker this month, and will consider hiring a third full-time caseworker in the spring to help process general assistance applications.

WHEELING TOWNSHIP has increased its general assistance budget by $38,000, and anticipates having to allocate more than $100,000 in the next fiscal year, which begins April 1, Mrs. Klatt said.

Townships are required by law to offer some form of emergency temporary assistance to township residents. The funds for general assistance come from the taxes levied by the township and from the township's other general income, Mrs. Klatt said.

Wheeling Township offers temporary financial assistance for food, rent and utilities until the resident has been accepted for state or federal assistance, she said.

Mrs. Klatt characterized most of the applicants as working people who "have made enough money to give their families a comfortable life, and manage to meet the payments on their home and other basic expenses."

MOST OF THESE people were unable to save money while they were working, and have no financial security to draw from now that they are unemployed, she said.

Not as many younger couples or senior citizens have applied to Wheeling Township for general assistance, although applications from them "have begun to increase," Mrs. Klatt said.

"Young people who have been to college are used to skipping and learning to get along on the basics. Older people have been through the Depression. It's the middle-aged person who is being hit the hardest by this economic situation," Mrs. Klatt said.

Other area townships are experiencing similar increases in general assistance applications, but several have only begun to consider hiring additional staff to handle the overload, she said.

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gaddis Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dieks, also 15, of 1161 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchhoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports.

Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lighted at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

Arson suspected in home garage fire

An early-morning fire Sunday damaged a garage attached to the Harold Frank home, 210 E. Palatine Rd., Prospect Heights.

Fire Chief Donald Gould said arson is suspected in the blaze, which began at 3:44 a.m.

Police said fire officials said patrons at a nearby tavern saw a man pull up to the garage, and then run out of the garage moments before it burst into flames. Police said the man was only described as white. The car was described as a 1973 blue-and-white Chevrolet.

No one was injured in the fire. Sheriff's Police are investigating the arson possibility.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $23 to $30 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.63 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.25.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS IN high school take an other form — paperback books, homecoming mums, school pennants, dances, class rings, year books, activity passes.

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.85 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average students will spend about $25 a year on books.

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

New parks recreation head wants you—to get involved

JANET SCHWASS

Janet Schwass, new recreation supervisor for the Wheeling Park District, says her primary goal is to get residents more involved in park programs.

"I don't think a lot of people know the park district is here, Miss Schwass said. "I want to make them aware that it's here and working for them.

"I think it's important to get to know the people and to communicate with them," she said. "If there's something they don't like or a program they would like started, I want them to tell me."

MISS SCHWASS, a graduate of Western Illinois University, where she majored in park and recreation administration, started working for the Wheeling Park District this month. Before coming to Wheeling she held part-time jobs with the Des Plaines and Glenview park districts.

"I like the town of Wheeling and probably will be moving here in the near future," she said. "I think it is important to really get into the community you're working in.

"I want to give the people the best possible programs as well as give them variety in programs," she said.

As recreation supervisor, Miss Schwass said she will work actively to increase the number of programs for girls and women.

"Right now I'm concentrating on developing programs for the girls," she said. "I want to get girls involved in park activities."

Among the new programs started by Miss Schwass are volleyball for girls in grades five and six and trampoline and tumbling for girls in elementary school.

THE SUPERVISOR also said she has started and is planning a number of dance classes for women. The classes will include instruction in techniques for ballet, tap, ballroom and modern dancing.

"I think the girls' and women's programs need development and I think that's one of the reasons they hired a woman," she said.

Miss Schwass said as recreation supervisor she also will be working to expand the park district's arts and crafts programs. "I think we need to expand our cultural programs, particularly for adults," she said.

Miss Schwass said she hopes to gain the experience and knowledge in Wheeling that will one day qualify her for a top administrative position in some field of recreation.

"I would like to be the top administrator in a park district some day," she said. "It's a long-range thing, maybe 10 years away, but it's my goal.

"The good thing about Wheeling is that I will be doing everything from having a whistle around my neck to working on a budget," she said. "I see myself as staying here a long time. At least I hope so."

A BUST OF GEORGE WASHINGTON is being formed by Tom Feldsien for first-grade students at Sandburg School, Wheeling. Feldsien, an art teacher at Buffalo Grove High School, is making the bust for a unit on Washington and in honor of the first President's birthday. He gave the finished sculpture to the school.

Community Party planning eight meetings for public

The Community Party (COM-PAR), one of Wheeling's three political parties vying for election in the April 15 village board race, will hold a series of eight public "COM-PARE-ability" sessions.

The first two such sessions will be 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Hawthorne School, 200 W. Glendale St., and 7:30 p.m. Friday at Heritage Park gym. COM-PAR candidates are incumbent trustees John W. Koepfen Jr., Albert W. Lang and Edward A. Berger, and Environmental Advisory Commission chairman William A. Rogers.

At a special coffee-organizational meeting Sunday at Koepfen's home, the four candidates demonstrated a slide presentation that will be an integral part of their campaigning and the "COM-PARE-ability" sessions.

The hour-long presentation stressed accomplishments claimed by the three current trustees and Rogers' environmental work.

KOEPFEN, who called the slide show "a new idea in presenting a ticket," said he was responsible for the village board accountability sessions, the opening up of board meetings to residents who wish to speak and the traffic signal at Schoenbeck and Dundee roads.

Lang said that as chairman of the village's judiciary committee he has helped reduce the cost of village vehicle stickers for the elderly, helped make it possible for residents to speak at village board meetings and started a review of building permit fees to see that all fees are paid.

Rogers outlined his participation in fights against noise and change in flight patterns at Pal-waukee Airport and his concern with flood control.

Berger told of his efforts to decrease flooding in the village, to open the extension of Wheeling Road to Dundee Road and to improve the street resurfacing and sidewalk replacement programs.

No questions were asked by the audience, mostly friends and campaign workers, after the presentation.

ADDITIONAL "COM-PARE-ability" sessions will be at Whitman School on March 6, Old Community Church on March 7, Sandburg School on March 11, Twain School on March 13, Field School on March 21 and Holmes Junior High School on March 25. All begin at 7:30 p.m.

The COM-PAR candidates are opposed by the Wheeling Representative Party — candidates Neil H. Brant, Kenneth R. Brady, Roger Powers and Robert E. Clark — and the Wheeling Improvement Party — candidates Gilbert Monoson, Otis (Skip) Hedlund, Charles Kerr and John Cole.

Cop gets suspension in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday after a village fire and police commission hearing on a department charge stemming from a fatal car crash last month.

Legal counsel for Patrolman David Mabbitt stipulated to the charge involving care of equipment and the suspension. The department charge was filed by Police Chief Martin Conroy Jan. 30, a day after the crash in which Christine Lovan, 21, of 1070 N. Deer Ave., Palatine Township, suffered fatal injuries.

Mabbitt's suspension is retroactive to Jan. 31, when he was placed on suspension pending Saturday's hearing. He is expected to return to duty in early March.

The department regulation, under which Mabbitt was charged, requires policemen to be responsible for the care of equipment assigned to them.

Mabbitt is slated to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided head on with the Lovan vehicle. A county coroner's jury has ruled the Lovan death as accidental.

Arlington Hts. begins lake land acquisition

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights has started land condemnation proceedings for Lake Arlington, but it will still be at least several more years before the wind ripples any water on the 113-acre site along McDonald Creek.

When completed Lake Arlington will be one of the largest recreational lakes in the Northwest suburbs. Intended primarily as a flood-control project, the lake will be north of Palatine Road and east of Windsor Drive and would have a variety of recreational uses.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding, said the village has filed to condemn 68 of the 113 acres needed for the lake.

But because the village hopes to receive assistance from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in building the $7.5 million lake, it could be some time before plans are drawn and construction started, he said.

THE VILLAGE board last week approved an application for state funds that could pay half the cost of acquiring the 68 acres, up to $232,000. The money is available under an open lands program of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

The rest of the land will have to be paid for by the village using federal-revenue sharing and general obligation bonds, Palmatier said.

The village board already has committed $750,000 from federal revenue-sharing and $4.1 million in general obligation bonds to pay for land acquisition and the construction of several flood-control projects.

Additional money for the Lake Arlington land probably will have to be added to the $4.1 million bond issue which covers only the first phase of a comprehensive $16 million program, Palmatier said.

"I feel we need to acquire the Lake Arlington land to keep it from becoming involved in some development," Palmatier said. The property is now undeveloped.

Once built, the lake would be irregularly shaped and would be large enough for boating and fishing. It would be more than twice the size of Lake Opeka, at Lee and Howard streets in Des Plaines. Lake Opeka is operated by the Des Plaines Park District and is used for small sailboats, canoeing, rowing and fishing.

PALMATIER SAID once the village acquires the Lake Arlington land it probably will lease it to the Arlington Heights Park District for recreational use even before the lake is built.

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Residents have ideas to end U.S. woes

'No one easy answer' to problems: Mikva

by LYNN ASINOFF

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., spent Saturday afternoon listening to friends tell him how to handle current economic and energy problems.

The meeting, which brought 40 residents to the Niles council chambers is the first of a series of such sessions planned by Mikva. He said the diverse positions taken by the conference participants showed him "that there is no one easy answer" to beating economic and energy problems.

The residents, who ranged from corporation executives to consumer advocates, all agreed that the economy is bad, but they offered varied approaches to solving the problems.

L. E. Dennis of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, for example, told Mikva the government should stop tinkering with the nation's economic engine. "We seem to be trying to adjust the carburetor when maybe we need a new engine," he said.

MOST PARTICIPANTS agreed that tax rebates were needed to stimulate the economy, but everyone had a different idea on how big they should be.

While some of the participants were angry about current economic problems, almost everyone praised Mikva for sponsoring the session. Most of the criticism was saved for President Ford's policies, with a little left over for the Democratic leadership of the country.

Newton Minow, a Glencoe attorney and former head of the Federal Communications Commission, called on the Democratic leadership of Congress to develop a plan instead of merely debating the President's plan.

"What we need is Congressional action rather than a Congressional debate," he said.

Many of the participants argued for the small businessman, saying that he needed some help from the government. Others said the government should cut military spending to make up for the money that will be lost through the tax rebates.

TURNING TO energy problems, Mikva set the mood of the discussion by stating he is very "unsympathetic" to the President's energy proposals. Others at the conference seemed to agree, arguing that Ford's proposals would decrease exploration for oil and burden the consumer without decreasing oil usage.

Theodore R. Eck of Standard Oil suggested Mikva look into a tax on large, gas-guzzling cars, thus encouraging people to buy smaller, more efficient cars.

Others called for a major scientific effort by the government to develop new forms and sources of energy. Some urged the use of coal, with government incentives for the conversion of industry to coal. Others suggested that the production of shale oil be pushed.

One injured, three arrested after melee

Three men were arrested by Des Plaines police early Sunday following a fight outside the River-Rand Bowl, 191 S. River Rd., in which a fourth man was injured.

Police, summoned to the bowling alley to break up a fight, found Richard A. Markworth, 25, of 1622 Walnut St., alone and bleeding from facial cuts and bruises.

Markworth told police he had been in a fight with three men whom he didn't know but described as wearing leather jackets. Police searched the area and found three men who met the description standing outside a nearby apartment complex.

Arrested were William Calvert, 21, of 309 N. Drury Ln., Arlington Heights, who was charged with aggravated battery; Charles Benson, 24, of 4702 Arbor Dr., Rolling Meadows, who was charged with disorderly conduct; and Paul Johnson, 19, of 7246 N. Olcott St., Chicago, who was charged with battery and obstructing a police officer.

The three are scheduled to appear April 10 in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.65 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.35.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS IN high school take an other form — paperback books, homecoming mums, school pennants, dances, class rings, year books, activity passes.

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.85 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average students will spend about $25 a year on books.

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can't afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

PROGRESS IS SLOW but steady on the $6.5 mil. weeks behind schedule, but the building should be ready for use by September. The addition will contain classrooms for art, speech, drama and physical fine arts addition to Maine North High School. School officials said the construction is several

Bicyclist's death in car accident still under probe

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gaddis Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dicks, also 15, of 1161 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports.

Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lighted at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

Candidates get ballot slots

Incumbents and challengers came out even in the recent ballot-position drawing for the Des Plaines aldermanic elections.

The drawing by City Clerk Eleanor Rohrbach is used to determine the placement of candidates' names in contested ward elections.

Two incumbents and two challengers came out on top in four of the five contested races. The fifth race features two newcomers.

Parks' matching-fund program

A tree grows...in memoriam

by LUISA GINETTI

John Smith liked to spend his free time fishing in the shade at Lake Opoka Park. When he died his family decided the most fitting memorial they could leave him would be to plant a tree at the park where he spent so many hours.

The tree is one of many that has been planted in Des Plaines parks through the park district's memorial-tree fund, a three-year-old program designed to help the park district pay the cost of replacing dead or damaged trees.

The concept behind the program is simple. Contributions in amounts of $3 or more may be made to the fund, with every donated dollar matched by park district funds. The money in the fund is used solely to pay the cost of purchasing and planting trees and shrubs for parks.

Robert Kunkel, park district director, said the tree fund concept is unique to this area and was started as part of Arbor Day ceremonies in 1972. The idea originated with a man in Canada who proposed the notion of seeking individual contributions to replenish trees in Canadian forests.

THE PROGRAM was mentioned in literature from the Illinois Parks and Recreation Assn. and city park district officials picked up on it and decided to adopt it in Des Plaines.

Kunkel said the fund has taken in about $8,000 since it was started in May 1972 and the money has enabled the park district to plant almost 150 trees.

Kunkel said most individual contributions to the fund are small amounts which average about $10. There have been very few cases of persons contributing the total cost of a tree, which ranges from $50 to $100 depending on the variety Kunkel said.

In cases where a person wishes to buy a tree and requests that it be planted at a specific park site, as John Smith's family did, the park district does its best to accommodate the contributor's wishes, the park director said.

KUNKEL SAID that while park officials agreed to accept full contributions to buy trees and plant them in the memory of someone, it was decided that markers or plaques bearing the person's name would not be allowed.

"We decided it might get too costly if we started doing that for everyone who wanted it and we also were concerned with the problem of vandalism," Kunkel said.

Biggest financial supporter of the tree fund has been the Des Plaines Junior Women's Club, which has contributed $2,000 to the fund during the last three years. Kunkel said the park district has appealed to other groups for funds for the program with some success and probably will do more to promote the program this spring.

Park officials hope to expand the tree-fund project to include some type of identification program to mark and designate each tree planted by type and variety.

KUNKEL SAID no specific plan has been developed to carry out the identification program but suggestions have included a color-coded system whereby different tree varieties would be tagged with a color marker. A chart of each color and its corresponding tree-type would be kept at the park district office and would also be available to residents.

By identifying the trees, Kunkel said, the parks could be more valuable to outdoor education studies and also allow more in the area of nature studies.

Kunkel said the tree fund has served its purpose well and continues to receive steady support.

"I think it's been successful because people can identify with the idea of a tree serving as a lasting memorial or commemorative and a symbol of life."

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Bike-safety programs on committee agenda

Plans for an experimental bicycle-safety program in Elk Grove Village this spring will be discussed Tuesday at a meeting of a committee of village and township representatives.

The meeting, set for 8 p.m. at the Elk Grove Township Hall, will be the second conducted by the committee, which was organized last month to set up a local bicycle-safety program that may later be extended to include other Elk Grove Township communities.

Parks Supt. Jack Claes, chairman of the committee, said he plans to show a committee a film of the operations of a bicycle-safety program he recently visited in Rockford.

The program, used by a Rockford school district, incorporates the use of a blacktopped course to teach children how to ride bicycles safely, Claes said.

CONSTRUCTING A similar course in Elk Grove is one of the ideas being considered by the committee along with the possibility of using portable props such as road signs and traffic cones to create a course that could be used at several schools in the village.

Elk Grove Township Supervisor Richard Hall, a member of the committee, said at the group's first meeting that $10,000 in township funds has been earmarked for bicycle safety.

The intent is to set up the experimental program this spring and later develop a more extensive program for all township communities, Hall said.

Depending on the success of the pilot program, plans include the possibilities of requiring bicycle licensing and safety instruction for students in kindergarten through eighth grade.

Rotary seeks books for benefit sale

The Elk Grove Rotary Club is seeking help from local residents to stock shelves for a book sale May 10.

The sale is conducted each year to raise funds for local charities. Persons with used books for donation are asked to call Jim Stevenson, 394-5050.

Cop gets suspension in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday after a village fire and police commission hearing on a department charge stemming from a fatal car crash last month.

Legal counsel for Patrolman David Mabbitt stipulated to the charge involving care of equipment and the suspension. The department charge was filed by Police Chief Martin Conroy Jan. 30, a day after the crash in which Christine Loran, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., Palatine Township, suffered fatal injuries.

Mabbitt's suspension is retroactive to Jan. 31, when he was placed on suspension pending Saturday's hearing. He is expected to return to duty in early March.

The department regulation, under which Mabbitt was charged, requires policemen to be responsible for the care of equipment assigned to them.

Mabbitt is slated to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided head on with the Loran vehicle. A county coroner's jury has ruled the Loran death as accidental.

Bicyclist's death in car accident still under probe

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gads Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dicks, also 15, of 1161 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports.

Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lighted at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.63 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.35.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS in high school take an other form — paperback books, homecoming mums, school pennants, dances, class rings, year books, activity passes.

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.85 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average students will spend about $25 a year on books.

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

Train station for Schaumburg: how long a wait?

by PAT GERLACH

Frustration is . . . driving to the Loop since you missed the 7:21 a.m. train out of Roselle, only because you couldn't find a parking space by the time the train pulled out.

So you end up sputtering and fuming down the tollway asking yourself over and over why Schaumburg, with its population of 36,000, Woodfield Shopping Center and all the other trappings of suburban living, doesn't have its own stop on The Milwaukee Road.

Well, village officials have been asking the same question for several years now and it seems that Schaumburg eventually may be much more than a whistle stop — if village officials begin working on a transportation center, an idea that already is four years old.

You just don't build a train station and tell the railroad to stop there. "It takes a minimum of two years before applications for a stop, federal funding for a der way at the federal level.

"We can't talk about a nebulous 20-acre site. We have to be able to actually define it in order to get going," Nelson says.

Atcher's idea is complex and includes centralizing air, highway, rail and bus transportation on land along Irving Park Road west of Rodenburg Road.

THE SITE OWNED by William Lambert, is west of Schaumburg Airport.

NEARLY 2,000 COMMUTERS who use the Roselle Schaumburg. Federal approval for the train station could take about two years.

station and other necessary steps can be accomplished," says Lois Geister, executive director of the Northwest Mass Transit District.

SCHAUMBURG HAS taken the first step by joining the transit district, which serves areas along The Milwaukee Road from Franklin Park west to Dundee. William Nelson, of the village mass transit committee, is now a district trustee.

Nelson is frank about his desire for the village to select a specific site for a regional transportation center proposed by Village Pres. Robert O. Atcher nearly four years ago. This must happen, Nelson says, before the project can get un-

Lambert holds extensive properties in the area, including partial ownership of Schaumburg-Centex Industrial Park and the airport.

Lambert favors the project and has said he will hold the property until the village makes a decision to proceed with the center.

Schaumburg officials believe their station must have a minimum of 3,500 parking spaces to avoid the commuter crunch now experienced in Roselle, where 1,800 to 2,000 commuters are served daily.

The Roselle station was expanded about four years ago and Roselle officials were dismayed when the facility had exhausted its passenger and parking limits within six months. Five parking lots, one of which is a 50-cent daily fee area, are provided. The other four lots are used by commuters who pay a monthly fee of $6.50 for Roselle residents while nonresidents are charged $9.

ATCHER ALSO envisions a separate freight station which would include piggyback loading facilities and a truck terminal. Village officials have also begun preliminary talks with transit district officials concerning a possible holding area for trains.

The transit district originally planned the holding yard on property in Hampshire, a community west of Elgin, though plan commissioners in the town objected.

The timetable for the project, officials say, would closely parallel completion of the Elgin-O'Hare Expressway, planned to bisect the industrial park north of the proposed center site. The state expects to begin construction of the expressway, which will connect with Interstate 90, within the next two years.

In the meantime, Schaumburg has begun a study of area transit needs which will probably result in bus service to the Roselle station and local shopping centers.

AN AIRPORT expansion feasibility study is also in progress which could lead to expansion of the present field which would be operated by the village.

struction of the center, through the transit district, after comprehensive plans are completed.

'We can't talk about a nebulous 20-acre site, we have to be able to actually define it in order to get going.'

Atcher has proposed that construction of the center be funded with revenue bonds in order to avoid an additional tax on residents.

Federal funding is available for con-

But, until the studies are finished and the plans drawn and applications processed, Schaumburg residents likely will face the daily crush in Roselle for several more years.

'No easy answer' to problems: Mikva

by LYNN ASINOF

U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-Ill., spent Saturday afternoon listening to friends tell him how to handle current economic and energy problems.

The meeting, which brought 40 residents to the Niles council chambers is the first of a series of such sessions planned by Mikva. He said the diverse positions taken by the conference participants showed him "that there is no one easy answer" to beating economic and energy problems.

The residents, who ranged from corporation executives to consumer advocates, all agreed that the economy is bad, but they offered varied approaches to solving the problems.

L. E. Dennis of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, for example, told Mikva the government should stop tinkering with the nation's economic engine. "We seem to be trying to adjust the carburetor when maybe we need a new engine," he said.

MOST PARTICIPANTS agreed that tax rebates were needed to stimulate the economy, but everyone had a different idea on how big they should be.

While some of the participants were angry about current economic problems, almost everyone praised Mikva for sponsoring the session. Most of the criticism was saved for President Ford's policies, with a little left over for the Democratic leadership of the country.

Newton Minow, a Glencoe attorney and former head of the Federal Communications Commission, called on the Democratic leadership of Congress to develop a plan instead of merely debating the President's plan.

"What we need is Congressional action rather than a Congressional debate," he said.

Many of the participants argued for the small businessman, saying that he needed some help from the government. Others said the government should cut military spending to make up for the money that will be lost through the tax rebates.

New resident loses stereo

David LaBernz received a rude welcome to Schaumburg during the weekend when burglars took about $600 worth of stereo equipment from his new home at 27 Hilltop Dr.

Police said LaBernz was in the process of moving into the home when he discovered the burglary Saturday. Entry was gained by breaking the glass in a rear door, authorities said.

The LaBernz burglary was one of three burglaries and two thefts investigated by police during the weekend.

Two burglaries were reported in the Lexington Field area of the village. Chester Maziarz, 413 Oleander Dr., told police early Sunday that $350 in cash and jewelry were stolen from his home. Entry was gained by breaking a rear window, police said.

Burglars also broke into the Curtis Rogers home, 1525 Columbine Dr., by smashing a rear window Saturday night, but nothing was reported taken.

Friday afternoon thieves took a $300 siren-control box from the fire department's fire prevention bureau station wagon which was parked at the Woodfield Shopping Center, police said. No signs of forced entry to the vehicle were found.

A $5,000 pickup truck was reported stolen Saturday from the shopping center. C. T. Amelse, 332 Hawthorn Ln., told police the vehicle was stolen between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Michigan schools — where even the pencils are free

In 1970, a Michigan parent took officials of the Ann Arbor school system to court about the constitutionality of charging fees for a free public education.

Later that year, the state supreme court ruled that schools must provide all required materials to students at no cost and Michigan launched the no-fee system. The court considers required materials everything from textbooks and workbooks to notebook paper and pencils.

While the Michigan system eliminates many required fees, parents still face some costs of education, said Josephine

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.85 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average students will spend about $25 a year on books.

One mother notes that basic fees are geared for the "average student," not those in accelerated courses, home economics, industrial arts or fine arts.

"Home economics is the biggest rip-off in the world. Some teachers insist you make an A-line skirt or a jumper — something the kids won't wear after it's made," she said.

The woman added that her daughter usually makes three projects a semester at costs ranging from $6 to $15.

PARENTS OF students in accelerated classes also complain of extra costs ranging from the expense of a special glaze for a ceramics course to the costs of extra paperback books for an honors English class.

School officials admit that many of the additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

Train station for Schaumburg: how long a wait?

which will connect with Interstate 90, within the next two years.

In the meantime, Schaumburg has begun a study of area transit needs which will probably result in bus service to the Roselle station and local shopping centers.

AN AIRPORT expansion feasibility study is also in progress which could lead to expansion of the present field which would be operated by the village.

Atcher has proposed that construction of the center be funded with revenue bonds in order to avoid an additional tax on residents.

Federal funding is available for construction of the center, through the transit district, after comprehensive plans are completed.

But, until the studies are finished and the plans drawn and applications processed, Schaumburg residents likely will face the daily crush in Roselle for several more years.

Police probe bicyclist's death

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gaddis Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dicks, also 15, of 1161 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports.

Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lighted at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

NEARLY 2,000 COMMUTERS who use the Roselle train station could be diverted to a proposed Milwaukee Road stop a few miles further west in Schaumburg. Village officials are working with Northwest Mass Transit District directors to obtain a train stop within a 20-acre regional transportation center being planned near Springinguth and Irving Park roads. Federal approval for the train station could take about two years.

Rising number of gangs in area

More juveniles linked to major crimes, police report

by STIRLING MORITA

Five Schaumburg youths are accused of belonging to a burglary ring.

A firecracker arsenal is uncovered after juvenile arrests for mailbox bombings in the village.

A 16-year-old is charged with a $700 armed robbery of a food store.

The list goes on and on. And during the last 2½ months more juvenile offenders are surfacing in major crimes in the village. Break-ins and other incidents more serious than normal window-smashing mischief are the offenses.

Although the 1974 police statistics do not include the early 1975 surge in juvenile crime, they do reflect an increase.

The number of serious juvenile offenses cleared by the police department rose 25 per cent from 181 in 1973 to 227 in 1974. A majority of the increase was in shoplifting.

Police have had their run-ins with teen-agers and petty shoplifting, but even the value of the items being taken is climbing. Two Hoffman Estates girls were detained for taking about $240 worth of clothing from stores in the Woodfield Shopping Center.

Offenders' ages range from 11 to 16. Seventeen is considered by statute old enough for adult prosecution.

THE REASON FOR the climbing juvenile crime rate? No one has a sure answer, but Police Chief Martin Conroy theorizes his policemen are catching offenders in the age group that may have been responsible for a good share of the village's crime all along.

"We have always thought that a lot of the burglaries, because of what was being taken, was done by what we call the teeny boppers," Conroy explained. "The roof-top burglaries didn't indicate anything professional."

He said the type of items stolen like money and whisky indicated juveniles were involved. "When I interviewed one kid, he indicated to me he was buying PCP (an animal tranquilizer). It takes money to do these kind of things."

Conroy said a majority of the arrests came from questioning youths caught in the "act." "If you don't catch them in the act, they don't open up too well."

THERE ARE NO indications area youths are any more restless recently, but some local officials have said there appears to be a sort of "gang" movement underfoot in Schaumburg Township.

Larry Walker, director of youth services for the township, said he has heard of at least three groups forming within the last six months. He said gang formation is the aftermath of the gang movement that revived three years ago on the West Coast.

The area groups are not of the knife-wielding, "West Side Story" caliber, and Walker added that he did not know if the area gangs were involved in the upswing in juvenile crime.

The groups are more organized than the normal school clique and have fewer than 10 members each. The groupings apparently start as early as freshman year in high school and center around a common interest. One of the popular interests is the martial arts, Walker said.

ONE LOCAL OFFICIAL said he has seen the tendency to hang around in "gangs" in junior high school-aged children. There apparently is more than just friendly rivalries among groups at various schools, he said.

"I think it (the movement) is a fad that will fade out soon," Walker said. "They need some kind of peer group identification."

Parental responsibility is still the key to keeping youngsters out of trouble, Walker added. One responsibility is making sure children obey the state curfew.

At 4 p.m. recently, two area youths were arrested by a Hoffman Estates patrolman for curfew violations. In their car were what police believed were the proceeds from two school burglaries.

One parent, when informed by telephone to pick up his daughter at the police station, said, "I don't want that b—."

1 of 3 break-ins during weekend

New resident loses stereo to burglars

David LaBernz received a rude welcome to Schaumburg during the weekend when burglars took about $600 worth of stereo equipment from his new home at 27 Hilltop Dr.

Police said LaBernz was in the process of moving into the home when he discovered the burglary Saturday. Entry was gained by breaking the glass in a rear door, authorities said.

The LaBernz burglary was one of three burglaries and two thefts investigated by police during the weekend.

Two burglaries were reported in the Lexington Field area of the village. Chester Maziarz, 413 Oleander Dr., told police early Sunday that $350 in cash and jewelry were stolen from his home. Entry was gained by breaking a rear window, police said.

Burglars also broke into the Curtis Rogers home, 1525 Columbine Dr., by smashing a rear window Saturday night, but nothing was reported taken.

Friday afternoon thieves took a $300 silver-control box from the fire department's fire prevention bureau station wagon which was parked at the Woodfield Shopping Center, police said. No signs of forced entry to the vehicle were found.

A $5,000 pickup truck was reported stolen Saturday from the shopping center. C. T. Amelse, 332 Hawthorn Ln., told police the vehicle was stolen between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Saturday.

Two seats up in April 12 vote

2 incumbents, newcomer in school race

Two incumbents and one newcomer have announced candidacies for the Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 Board of Education in school elections April 12.

Walter J. Kendall III, an attorney in the Illinois Dept. of Public Aid, said he is planning to run for the Dist. 15 board because he has gained "an increasing sense that the board is very distant from the parents and the voters."

Kendall, 33, said "there's a need for making the (board of education) meetings more a form for exchange of ideas for parents and other people to take part." He says that in recent years more than 99 per cent of the resolutions approved by the board have been approved in a unanimous vote.

Incumbents Otto Ellering and Joel Meyer both said they will seek reelection to the two seats open on the Dist. 15 board this year.

Meyer, 2406 George St., Rolling Meadows, has served on the board since 1957.

"There's an entirely new challenge now in Dist. 15 where certain portions of our community are maturing and yet we are expanding in other portions of our community," he said.

Ellering, 927 Marsha Dr., Palatine, is completing his ninth year on the Dist. 15 board. "I'm sort of interested in what is going on in the community and the school district," he said and he feels two issues this year will be use of school facilities and building programs and salary negotiations with district teachers.

When children present

Do I have to drive 20 m.p.h. in a school zone when the children are in their classrooms. If the traffic sign says I must do so only when school children are present?

No, the children must be physically present in proximity to the road before you have to obey the 20 m.p.h. speed limit.

Research for blind vets

Is the Veterans Administration helping blind veterans through technical research?

Yes. Among some of the projects are ultra-sonic eye-glasses that indicate to the blind person his distance from an object, a laser cane that emits beams to detect obstacles and two machines that enable the blind to read.

An Easter decor program will be offered at the Palatine Senior Citizen Center, 248 S. Brockway St., Thursdays at 11:30 a.m. starting this week.

The first project will be the construction of Styrofoam eggs. The class will be taught by Lois Nelson of Palatine.

This is the first of many arts and crafts programs planned for the senior citizens.

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN NIMROD, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Sales tax tarnishing gold mine

City budget a 'taxing' proposition in '76?

by TONI GENNETTI

Once it was the town that could afford just about anything — innovative propane-fueled police cars, $61,000 worth of special television monitoring equipment to inspect city sewer lines and those famous Mercedes Benz trucks that cruise the neighborhoods providing free garbage service to homeowners.

Rolling Meadows residents used to get it all practically free thanks to a hearty sales tax income that cushioned the city treasury with an average of more than $100,000 monthly.

But now the stagnating national economy is taking its toll on the once hefty city purse, and the woes are starting to echo again as officials attempt to piece together a budget for the approaching new fiscal year.

THE TROUBLE started last year, when, with approximately $4 million in revenue, the city for the first time in years began tightening its belt. Inflation — which sent the costs of most goods used by the city soaring — and several unforeseen land purchases cut into the municipal coffers by midsummer.

This year, the picture doesn't look much better, according to City Mgr. James Watson. In fact, things could get worse if the inflation-recession pattern continues, driving up the cost of services yet bringing in no extra funds to pay for them.

The first view of the 1975-76 financial outlook came last week when Watson discussed with aldermen on the finance committee preliminary revenue figures. The figures indicate the city could receive up to $4.4 million in the coming year beginning May 1, but there were few smiles among officials despite the increased total.

That figure would just about take care of services at the level they now exist, but city officials know the status quo is not going to be good enough to get by on much longer.

CITY DEPARTMENTS for a year, for example, have had to adhere to a policy freezing employment. Openings were not filled in an effort to save money and new hirings, which originally were authorized for the 1974 fiscal year, also were put off.

It is no wonder aldermen winced at the preliminary figures, particularly the ones that projected sales tax income — the tarnishing city gold mine — could be slightly under this year's total.

Watson told aldermen he was skeptical

Cop gets suspension in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday after a village fire and police commission hearing on a department charge stemming from a fatal car crash last month.

Legal counsel for Patrolman David Mabbitt stipulated to the charge involving care of equipment and the suspension. The department charge was filed by Police Chief Martin Conroy Jan. 30, a day after the crash in which Christine Lovan, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., Palatine Township, suffered fatal injuries.

Mabbitt's suspension is retroactive to Jan. 31, when he was placed on suspension pending Saturday's hearing. He is expected to return to duty in early March.

The department regulation, under which Mabbitt was charged, requires policemen to be responsible for the care of equipment assigned to them.

Mabbitt is slated to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided head on with the Lovan vehicle. A county coroner's jury has ruled the Lovan death as accidental.

One injured, three arrested after melee

Three men were arrested by Des Plaines police early Sunday following a fight outside the River-Rand Bowl, 191 S. River Rd., in which a fourth man was injured.

Police, summoned to the bowling alley to break up a fight, found Richard A. Markworth, 25, of 1622 Walnut St., alone and bleeding from facial cuts and bruises.

Markworth told police he had been in a fight with three men whom he didn't know but described as wearing leather jackets. Police searched the area and found three men who met the description standing outside a nearby apartment complex.

Arrested were William Calvert, 34, of 309 N. Drury Ln., Arlington Heights, who was charged with aggravated battery; Charles Benson, 24, of 4702 Arbor Dr., Rolling Meadows, who was charged with disorderly conduct; and Paul Johnson, 19, of 7246 N. Olcott St., Chicago, who was charged with battery and obstructing a police officer.

The three are scheduled to appear April 10 in the Des Plaines branch of Circuit Court.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-year public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.65 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.55.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They

Michigan schools — where even the pencils are free

In 1970, a Michigan parent took officials of the Ann Arbor school system to court about the constitutionality of charging fees for a free public education.

Later that year, the state supreme court ruled that schools must provide all required materials to students at no cost and Michigan launched the no-fee system. The court considers required materials everything from textbooks and workbooks to notebook paper and pencils.

While the Michigan system eliminates many required fees, parents still face some costs of education, said Josephine

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS IN high school take an other form — paperback books, homecoming mums, school pennants, dances, class rings, year books, activity passes.

Basic costs vary from district to district with High School Dist. 211 charging $14 for textbooks while High School Dist. 214 charges only $12. Yet in Dist. 211, field trip transportation is provided at no charge while Dist. 214 students must share in the costs.

In Maine Township High School Dist. 207, a student is required to pay a basic fee of $4.85 to cover costs of towel rental, gym lock rental, laboratory fees and class dues. The same students — who must buy all textbooks — can spend up to $76 a year on class texts. The average student will spend about $25 a year on books.

One mother notes that basic fees are geared for the "average student," not those in accelerated courses, home economics, industrial arts or fine arts.

"Home economics is the biggest rip-off in the world. Some teachers insist you make an A-line skirt or a jumper — something the kids won't wear after it's made," she said.

The woman added that her daughter usually makes three projects a semester at costs ranging from $6 to $15.

Part of flood-control plan near Salt Creek 250 acres earmarked for recreational use

by DIANE MERMIGAS
The Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, providing flood control for areas

THE METROPOLITAN Sanitary District has purchased three parcels for use in the Upper Salt Creek Watershed flood-control project, which also will be park sites. The three parcels (shaded) are 35 acres at the northeast corner of the Palatine and Quentin roads, about 40 acres south of Reseda West and east of Plum Grove Road and about 125 acres east of Harper College in Palatine Township.

along Salt Creek, will give the Palatine Park District 250 acres for recreational development by 1980.

Park district and Metropolitan Sanitary District officials have signed an agreement that allows the park district to indefinitely maintain the park sites in Palatine Township.

The MSD is purchasing the land on which the flood-control basins will be constructed along Salt Creek. The MSD has used a portion of a $360 million bond fund to purchase about 35 acres south of the Reseda West subdivision and east of Plum Grove Road, about 40 acres on the northeast corner of Palatine and Quentin roads and about 125 acres east of Harper College in Palatine Township.

THE PARK DISTRICT has plans to use portions of the watershed land for open-field recreation facilities such as baseball diamonds, soccer and football field and racing tracks, said Fred Hall, Palatine Park District director.

Park district officials also have suggested that some of the property could be used as public garden plots where residents can plant their own vegetables or flowers, Hall said.

"We want to make certain that we are provided with some flat and nonflood plain land on which we could eventually build something more sturdy, like a building, said Hall.

LeRoy Carlson, MSD engineer working on the project, said that "the MSD would not object to the park district constructing" meeting rooms, recreation centers or other kinds of structures on the property "where the land is solid enough to hold the weight."

THE PALATINE Park District could also construct tennis courts, swimming pools, nature trails and picnic pavilions on the watershed property. The district may consider building a nature study center or a boathouse on one of the reservoirs where residents will be able to rent boats and paddles, Hall said.

The park district will be responsible for paying for the construction of any facilities that it builds. Buildings would be paid for through a referendum or bond issue, Hall said.

"But the important thing to remember here is that as the new areas which we now serve continue to grow in the years to come, the park district will have enough park land to offer its residents," he said.

The Palatine Park District received most of its present 350 park acres as donations from developers. Hall said he expects the district to acquire additional park land from new developers of vacant land in unincorporated Palatine Township.

MOST OF THE township's unincorporated areas are now included in the Palatine Park District since it merged with the Palatine Rural Park District Jan. 1.

Hall estimates that the park district will have at least 650 acres of park land by 1980 which will include the MSD land easement and land donations from developers like L. F. Draper who recently donated 42 acres to the park district.

"The park district has been fortunate because it has not had to purchase property for development. We have saved the residents money that way, although they have had to pay for the construction of facilities," Hall said.

"The MSD land that the park district will maintain through this project will give land security to a park district that is bound to grow in residents between now and 1980," he said.

the sales tax figure would rise much above $1,400,000 about $50,000 less than this year's estimated total. The reason, he said, is several major commercial developments, including the Treasury and the Levitz furniture store, have failed to produce substantial revenues as officials originally projected.

And the city's best sales income source, Western Electric Co., also is experiencing hard times, the city manager said, a factor which could be the costliest to the city.

ONE BRIGHT outlook which Watson conceded, however, is the prospect of the $30 million Gould Center's opening and contribution to the sales tax rolls.

"I hope I'm fairly realistic, but in this economy things could change," Watson warned the aldermen.

Should the sales tax money decline, part of it could be made up in the higher total, which the city hopes to receive from building permit fees, which were raised this year.

But a continuing slump in the building trades industry would wipe out any hope of help in that quarter.

For city employees, the financial outlook already has cut by more than half salary increases which the city doled out last year. The 13 per cent raise of last year will read only 5 per cent this year if the city council adopts Watson's recommendation.

Even at that total, salaries are expected to consume 53 per cent of the city's expected revenue, Watson's estimate's expected revenue, Watson's tentative figures indicate.

THE WORST NEWS in all this, however, may ultimately come to the city's taxpayers. Talk in the past of increasing real estate property taxes or charging for services like residential garbage collection always has been in whispers.

That talk is becoming increasingly open, even to the point where last week one alderman, Daniel Weber, 4th, said the city should seriously begin thinking about ways to increase its revenue.

Comments like that are a noticeable switch from only a year ago when a call by Watson for a 10-cent tax charge for garbage service to homeowners was swiftly and unanimously defeated by the city council.

The pressure cooker may still be bearable this year, but budget time, 1976 — coincidentally an off-election year — could prove to be a "taxing" period — literally — for both officials and residents.

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

250 acres for parks in flood-control plan

by DIANE MEHRIGAS

The Upper Salt Creek Watershed project, providing flood control for areas along Salt Creek, will give the Palatine Park District 250 acres for recreational development by 1980.

Park District and Metropolitan Sanitary District officials have signed an agreement that allows the park district to indefinitely maintain the park sites in Palatine Township.

The MSD is purchasing the land on which the flood-control basins will be constructed along Salt Creek. The MSD has used a portion of a $360 million bond fund to purchase about 35 acres south of the Reseda West subdivision and east of Plum Grove Road, about 40 acres on the northeast corner of Palatine and Quentin roads and about 125 acres east of Harper College in Palatine Township.

THE PARK DISTRICT has plans to use portions of the watershed land for open-field recreation facilities such as baseball diamonds, soccer and football field and racing tracks, said Fred Hall, Palatine Park District director.

Park district officials also have suggested that some of the property could be used as public garden plots where residents can plant their own vegetables or flowers, Hall said.

"We want to make certain that we are provided with some flat and nonflood plain land on which we could eventually build something more sturdy, like a building, said Hall.

LeRoy Carlson, MSD engineer working on the project, said that "the MSD would not object to the park district constructing" meeting rooms, recreation centers or other kinds of structures on the property "where the land is solid enough to hold the weight."

THE PALATINE Park District could also construct tennis courts, swimming pools, nature trails and picnic pavilions on the watershed property. The district may consider building a nature study center or a boathouse on one of the reservoirs where residents will be able to rent boats and paddles, Hall said.

The park district will be responsible for paying for the construction of any facilities that it builds. Buildings would be paid for through a referendum or bond issue, Hall said.

"But the important thing to remember here is that as the new areas which we now serve continue to grow in the years to come, the park district will have

A 38-year-old sales clerk was charged by Palatine police Saturday with selling liquor to a minor.

John Sellinger, employed at the Half Price Liquor store, 243 W. Colfax St., was cited for allegedly selling beer to a minor. Palatine police said a hearing would likely be held by Village Pres. Wendell Jones, liquor commissioner, into the incident.

Liquor license holders can be subject to temporary suspension or revocation of their licenses for violations of liquor laws.

Car slams mailbox

A 38-year-old Palatine man was injured slightly late Saturday when his vehicle struck a mailbox on Rand Road just south of Lake-Cook Road.

Injured was Francis Moore, 1311 Baldwin Ct. The accident occurred as Moore was headed southeastbound on Rand Road. State Police said Moore's vehicle ran off the right side of the road, striking a mailbox head-on.

Moore was taken to Northwest Community Hospital where he was treated and released. He was cited by State Police for driving too fast for conditions on the 45 m.p.h. road and is scheduled to appear in Mount Prospect branch of Circuit Court April 11.

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.65 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classmate enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.35.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS in high school take an-

Michigan schools — where even the pencils are free

In 1970, a Michigan parent took officials of the Ann Arbor school system to court about the constitutionality of charging fees for a free public education.

Later that year, the state supreme court ruled that schools must provide all required materials to students at no cost and Michigan launched the no-fee system. The court considers required materials everything from textbooks and workbooks to notebook paper and pencils.

While the Michigan system eliminates many required fees, parents still face some costs of education, said Josephine

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

One mother notes that basic fees are geared for the "average student," not those in accelerated courses, home economics, industrial arts or fine arts.

"Home economics is the biggest rip-off in the world. Some teachers insist you make an A-line skirt or a jumper — something the kids won't wear after it's made," she said.

The woman added that her daughter usually makes three projects a semester at costs ranging from $6 to $15.

PARENTS OF students in accelerated classes also complain of extra costs ranging from the expense of a special glaze for a ceramics course to the costs of extra paperback books for an honors English class.

School officials admit that many of the additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

Village weighs action against 2 developments

Palatine officials will decide tonight what action they will take against developers who may have fraudulently obtained zoning within the township.

A legal opinion is expected on whether the village board can start proceedings to strip property of high-density zoning allegedly received illegally and revert it back to R-1, single-family residential. The board meeting is at 8 p.m. at the Slade Street Fire Station, 117 W. Slade St.

The two-parcels involved are the 94-acre Prairie Brook complex at Baldwin and Rand roads and the 66-acre Old Madrid complex at Northwest Highway and Hicks Road. Three county officials have been indicted for extortion in connection with a county zoning scandal.

Trustee Bryan P. Coughlin Jr. also has recommended the board take legal action to dismantle the 14-story apartment building now standing on the Old Madrid property and not issue anymore building permits for construction on the property. The Prairie Brook complex remains undeveloped and the village is objecting to a rezoning request before the Cook County Zoning Board of Appeals.

Last week Trustees Coughlin and Philip E. Stern met with U.S. Asst. Atty. Anton Valukas to request an investigation into the village's role in the alleged payoff scheme involving the Old Madrid property.

Valukas agreed to look into the village's role in the payoff scheme in the course of his investigation.

"I have no knowledge of any village involvement whatsoever at this time," Valukas said. He added there would be no reply to the questions of possible wrongdoing by village officials unless indictments were handed down.

Cop gets suspension in fatal crash

A Schaumburg patrolman was given a 30-day suspension Saturday after a village fire and police commission hearing on a department charge stemming from a fatal car crash last month.

Legal counsel for Patrolman David Mabbitt stipulated to the charge involving care of equipment and the suspension. The department charge was filed by Police Chief Martin Conroy Jan. 30, a day after the crash in which Christine Loran, 21, of 1079 N. Deer Ave., Palatine Township, suffered fatal injuries.

Mabbitt's suspension is retroactive to Jan. 31, when he was placed on suspension pending Saturday's hearing. He is expected to return to duty in early March.

The department regulation, under which Mabbitt was charged, requires policemen to be responsible for the care of equipment assigned to them.

Mabbitt is slated to appear March 12 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court on a traffic charge of improper passing. Police said Mabbitt was passing a car on Roselle Road just south of Thacker Street in Schaumburg when his squad car collided head on with the Loran vehicle. A county coroner's jury has ruled the Loran death as accidental.

Bridge offers youth justice workshop

The Bridge Youth Services of Palatine will sponsor a four-week juvenile justice workshop Mondays beginning at 7:30 p.m. today at the Bridge, 434½ E. Northwest Hwy.

The free workshops will be conducted by Jean Fliser, coordinator of community development for The Bridge and a legal counselor.

The workshops will include discussions on issues relating to juvenile justice and the judicial system. The sessions will be from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. four consecutive Mondays.

enough park land to offer its residents," he said.

The Palatine Park District received most of its present 330 park acres as donations from developers. Hall said he expects the district to acquire additional park land from new developers of vacant land in unincorporated Palatine Township.

MOST OF THE township's unincorporated areas are now included in the Palatine Park District since it merged with the Palatine Rural Park District Jan. 1.

Hall estimates that the park district will have at least 650 acres of park land by 1980 which will include the MSD land easement and land donations from developers like L. F. Draper who recently donated 42 acres to the park district.

"The park district has been fortunate because it has not had to purchase property for development. We have saved the residents money that way, although they have had to pay for the construction of facilities," Hall said.

"The MSD land that the park district will maintain through this project will give land security to a park district that is bound to grow in residents between now and 1980," he said.

THE PALATINE Park District is one of many local sponsors of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project. Other sponsors who will also agree to maintain property in their areas include the Salt Creek Park District, the villages of Palatine and Elk Grove, the Cook County Forest Preserve District and the North Cook County Soil and Conservation District.

Federal and local funds are being used to underwrite the estimated $33 million construction costs of the Upper Salt Creek Watershed project which will minimize flooding in portions of Palatine, Arlington Heights, Addison, Elk Grove Village, Roselle, Elmhurst, Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Itasca, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg and Wood Dale.

tax rebates were needed to stimulate the economy, but everyone had a different idea on how big they should be.

While some of the participants were angry about current economic problems, almost everyone praised Mikva for sponsoring the session. Most of the criticism was saved for President Ford's policies, with a little left over for the Democratic leadership of the country.

Newton Milow, a Glencoe attorney and former head of the Federal Communications Commission, called on the Democratic leadership of Congress to develop a plan instead of merely debating the President's plan.

"What we need is Congressional action rather than a Congressional debate," he said.

Many of the participants argued for the small businessman, saying that he needed some help from the government. Others said the government should cut military spending to make up for the money that will be lost through the tax rebates.

Mikva said the session was "most useful and profitable" providing him with many new ideas that he will explore. He said he hopes to sponsor other such sessions to make use of "deep pool of talent and expertise" in the 10th District.

113-acre site in Arlington Heights

Land acquisition begins for lake

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights has started land condemnation proceedings for Lake Arlington, but it will still be at least several more years before the wind ripples any water on the 113-acre site along McDonald Creek.

When completed Lake Arlington will be one of the largest recreational lakes in the Northwest suburbs. Intended primarily as a flood-control project, the lake will be north of Palatine Road and east of Windsor Drive and would have a variety of recreational uses.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding, said the village has filed to condemn 68 of the 113 acres needed for the lake.

But because the village hopes to receive assistance from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in building the $7.5 million lake, it could be some time before plans are drawn and construction started, he said.

THE VILLAGE board last week approved an application for state funds that could pay half the cost of acquiring the 68 acres, up to $232,000. The money is available under an open lands program of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

The rest of the land will have to be paid for by the village using federal-revenue sharing and general obligation bonds, Palmatier said.

The village board already has committed $750,000 from federal revenue-sharing and $4.1 million in general obligation bonds to pay for land acquisition and the construction of several flood-control projects.

Additional money for the Lake Arlington land probably will have to be added to the $4.1 million bond issue which covers only the first phase of a comprehensive $10 million program, Palmatier said.

"I feel we need to acquire the Lake Arlington land to keep it from becoming involved in some development," Palmatier said. The property is now undeveloped.

Once built, the lake would be irregularly shaped and would be large enough for boating and fishing. It would be more than twice the size of Lake Opeka, at Lee and Howard streets in Des Plaines. Lake Opeka is operated by the Des Plaines Park District and is used for small sailboats, canoeing, rowing and fishing.

PALMATIER SAID once the village acquires the Lake Arlington land it probably will lease it to the Arlington Heights Park District for recreational use even before the lake is built.

He said the village is condemning the 68 acres, which lie immediately south of the Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way, because discussions with the property's owners have made it apparent they were not willing to sell the land at a reasonable price.

Three other property parcels are needed to complete the lake site. Two lie north of the Edison right-of-way and the third, 25 acres, is part of the proposed second campus site for Harper College at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads.

LAKE ARLINGTON will be twice the size of Des Plaines' Lake Opeka, a popular summer sailing spot. Arlington Heights officials are condemning land as the first step toward a lake for their community.

Residents suggest ways to end woes

by LYNN ASINOF
U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, spent Saturday afternoon listening to friends tell him how to handle current economic and energy problems.

The meeting, which brought 40 residents to the Niles council chambers is the first of a series of such sessions planned by Mikva. He said the diverse positions taken by the conference participants showed him "that there is no one easy answer" to beating economic and energy problems.

The residents, who ranged from corporation executives to consumer advocates, all agreed that the economy is bad, but they offered varied approaches to solving the problems.

L. E. Dennis of the Brotherhood of Railway and Airline Clerks, for example, told Mikva the government should stop tinkering with the nation's economic engine. "We seem to be trying to adjust the carburetor when maybe we need a new engine," he said.

MOST PARTICIPANTS agreed that tax rebates were needed to stimulate the economy, but everyone had a different idea on how big they should be.

While some of the participants were angry about current economic problems, almost everyone praised Mikva for sponsoring the session. Most of the criticism was saved for President Ford's policies, with a little left over for the Democratic leadership of the country.

Newton Milow, a Glencoe attorney and former head of the Federal Communications Commission, called on the Democratic leadership of Congress to develop a plan instead of merely debating the President's plan.

"What we need is Congressional action rather than a Congressional debate," he said.

Many of the participants argued for the small businessman, saying that he needed some help from the government. Others said the government should cut military spending to make up for the money that will be lost through the tax rebates.

TURNING TO energy problems, Mikva set the mood of the discussion by stating he is very "unsympathetic" to the President's energy proposals. Others at the conference seemed to agree, arguing that Ford's proposals would decrease exploration for oil and burden the consumer without decreasing oil usage.

Theodore R. Eck of Standard Oil suggested Mikva look into a tax on large, gas-guzzling cars, thus encouraging people to buy smaller, more efficient cars.

Others called for a major scientific effort by the government to develop new forms and sources of energy. Some urged the use of coal, with government incentives for the conversion of industry to coal. Others suggested that the production of shale oil be pushed.

Mikva said the session was "most useful and profitable" providing him with many new ideas that he will explore. He said he hopes to sponsor other such sessions to make use of "deep pool of talent and expertise" in the 10th District.

Township hires extra help

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Ninety persons a month, many of them laid-off waitresses, truck drivers and factory workers, are walking into the Wheeling Township Hall and asking for help to pay the bills.

The 90 new monthly cases represents a significant increase in township general assistance applications — only 30 new applications were made each month last summer — and has caused the township to hire an additional caseworker.

Jane Klatt, the township's social services director, was hired in June because of the rapidly increasing general assistance program.

The township hired another full-time case worker this month, and will consider hiring a third full-time caseworker in the spring to help process general assistance applications.

WHEELING TOWNSHIP has increased its general assistance budget by $38,000, and anticipates having to allocate more than $100,000 in the next fiscal year, which begins April 1, Mrs. Klatt said.

Townships are required by law to offer some form of emergency temporary assistance to township residents. The funds for general assistance come from the taxes levied by the township and from the township's other general income, Mrs. Klatt said.

Wheeling Township offers temporary financial assistance for food, rent and utilities until the resident has been accepted for state or federal assistance, she said.

Mrs. Klatt characterized most of the applicants as working people who "have made enough money to give their families a comfortable life, and manage to meet the payments on their home and other basic expenses."

MOST OF THESE people were unable to save money while they were working, and have no financial security to draw from now that they are unemployed, she said.

Not as many younger couples or senior citizens have applied to Wheeling Township for general assistance, although applications from them "have begun to increase," Mrs. Klatt said.

"Young people who have been to college are used to skimping and learning to get along on the basics. Older people have been through the Depression. It's the middle-aged person who is being hit the hardest by this economic situation," Mrs. Klatt said.

Other area townships are experiencing similar increases in general assistance applications, but several have only begun to consider hiring additional staff to handle the overload, she said.

Candidates' night on council's agenda

The Northwest Suburban Council of Associations tonight will make final arrangements for its candidates night, geared for the upcoming Mount Prospect village election.

The group also is expected to review the village's comprehensive plan, which is under study before being adopted.

The meeting will begin at 8 p.m. at Indian Grove School, 1340 N. Burning Bush Ln.

Julin 'retires' — to a key post with village

by LYNN ASINOF

G. Allan Julin Jr., 109 W. Sunset Rd., retired last month but has found a new outlet for his skills as a member of Mount Prospect's downtown development commission.

Julin, 62, retired Jan. 31 as senior vice president of Chicago Title and Trust Co. and executive vice president of Chicago Title Insurance Co. Last week he was appointed to the downtown commission.

The appointment came as a result of a Herald report on village efforts to get senior citizens and retired persons more active in village operations. "I simply

School fees, extra costs ravage parents' pocketbooks

by LINDA PUNCH

State law calls for free public education but parents' checkbooks tell a different story.

Parents' belief in free education disappears when their first child enters kindergarten. The myth of no-cost public schooling is lost in a flurry of book fees, towel rental charges and an endless outpouring of money for pencils, crayons and notebook paper — the hidden costs of education.

A parent in the Northwest suburbs can expect to spend at least $160 in required fees during their child's 12-years public school career. The additional cost — including optional fees and supplies — can average $25 to $50 a year for junior high and high school students.

A 1973 STUDY of student fees in Dist. 207 estimates the average student will spend from $38.20 to $59.65 each year of his high school education. The study shows that student expenses vary greatly depending on courses they take.

Theoretically, a sophomore enrolled in art, foods and clothing, general business, stenography, typing and physical education could spend $85.40 in a year. A classroom enrolled in power mechanics, electronics, advanced math, general business, English and physical education would spend only $31.35.

School districts try to keep costs to parents at a minimum, with most districts charging required fees only for textbooks. The average fee ranges from $10 to $14.

The optional costs — insurance, activity tickets, yearbooks, field trips — are the ones that hit parents hardest. They are usually associated with enrichment-type experience, such as athletics or music.

"Public education isn't free anymore — you can expect to spend up to a $100 a year on your kid," said one mother. "You don't believe it's true until you add it all up."

FEES IN ELEMENTARY districts vary. Des Plaines Dist. 62 charges $2 for kindergarten students and $12 for all other grades. Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 has a $10 fee for elementary students and an $11 fee for junior high students. Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 charges no fees.

A mother of two Des Plaines elementary students said she has already spent at least $25 on each child, not including the basic $12 registration fee.

"The teacher gives you a list of supplies the kids have to buy — gym clothes, gym shoes, socks, pencils, notebooks, crayons, paper. It's an ongoing expense," she said.

The woman has also spent money on field trips (visit to the symphony at $3.50) and an outdoor-education program ($30). "And if your kid wants to take music, you either buy an instrument or rent one for $13.50 a month," she said.

Elementary school students are also famous for last minute requests for coffee cans, Kleenex boxes, milk cartons and other odds and ends for art projects, the mother added.

THE EXTRAS IN high school take an-

Michigan schools — where even the pencils are free

In 1970, a Michigan parent took officials of the Ann Arbor school system to court about the constitutionality of charging fees for a free public education.

Later that year, the state supreme court ruled that schools must provide all required materials to students at no cost and Michigan launched the no-fee system. The court considers required materials everything from textbooks and workbooks to notebook paper and pencils.

While the Michigan system eliminates many required fees, parents still face some costs of education, said Josephine

Haueter, of the Michigan Dept. of Education.

"The law states only that districts provide a reasonable amount of paper and pencils. That doesn't mean a child won't have to supplement the supplies," she said.

DISTRICTS MAY not charge for towels, locks, lockers, home economics and industrial arts materials, textbooks, band instruments or other items necessary for a child to graduate from school. Students are expected to pay for cap and gown fees, class dues, athletic activities, lunches, yearbooks, gym shoes, swimming suits and similar optional items.

Mrs. Haueter notes that the cost-free system was "a bit of a financial bind, especially at first. The districts have managed to get by using local tax money."

Supporters of the Michigan system say it is the only way to provide a truly free public education to youngsters. Yet, opponents note that the system is not free — taxpayers still foot the bill. And many of those citizens — the elderly, single people and the childless — end up paying for services with no benefit for them.

One mother notes that basic fees are geared for the "average student," not those in accelerated courses, home economics, industrial arts or fine arts.

"Home economics is the biggest rip-off in the world. Some teachers insist you make an A-line skirt or a jumper — something the kids won't wear after it's made," she said.

The woman added that her daughter usually makes three projects a semester at costs ranging from $6 to $15.

PARENTS OF students in accelerated classes also complain of extra costs ranging from the expense of a special glaze for a ceramics course to the costs of extra paperback books for an honors English class.

School officials admit that many of the additional costs stem from the variety of courses now offered by schools. "If parents want to stick to just the three R's, we can cut costs considerably," said Bruce Altergott, High School Dist. 211 assistant superintendent.

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

Africa lives in her paintings

Birdell Wendt is one of the most fascinating people in Mount Prospect. She has an unquenchable thirst for seeing and doing the unusual and recording it in sketches and paintings. She is a renowned artist with countless awards and tributes attesting to her ability.

Birdell, her husband, Howard, and 22-year-old daughter, Mary, recently returned from a 15-day trip to Africa.

"It was like turning the calendar back 2,000 years," said Mrs. Wendt. "The ancient customs and culture are still there."

Birdell sketched all through the trip using a ball point pen and sketch pads. She said she felt like a native peddler because she was selling the sketches as fast as she could produce them.

BIRDELL'S DRAWINGS included scenes of the Sahara Desert, the Atlas mountains, rich ski areas, a king's palace and small banana trees. She drew women wearing caftans and veils, carrying well water on their heads. She recorded goats climbing in trees, eating leaves.

At casinos she captured snake charmers and belly dancers — and "blue men" who served as doormen or waiters.

"The blue men," she explained, "were blacks from the desert who rub stones on their skin to produce a blue hue and they wear blue clothes, as well. Everybody wanted some of my blue men pictures."

In Morocco, Birdell rode a camel along the Atlantic Ocean and made sketches of the animal. As a result, she plans to include camels on her next Christmas greeting card.

This was the second time the Wendts have visited that part of the world.

SHORTLY AFTER arriving home, Birdell and Howard went to Mexico to visit friends who took them to nontourist attractions there. They saw a variety of ancient temples and pyramids that they climbed and Birdell sketched.

Also, while in Mexico, Birdell actually fought a bull at a circular restaurant where a matador dressed and instructed her. Howard took a picture of his wife at the conclusion, when she was bowing, receiving applause and saying "ole." He has had a large calendar made with an enlargement of that snapshot on it.

Mrs. Wendt has been painting all of her life. She has awards from shows all across the country. Her paintings also hang in France, South Africa, Morocco, Mexico as well as throughout the United States. She is doing paintings for people in England and Spain too.

Locally, Birdell has done all sorts of pictures of village landmarks like the water tower at St. Paul Church as well as people like the village mayor and a mailman.

Once a week, Birdell acts as a volunteer at Americana Nursing Home in Arlington Heights and teaches art therapy to patients there.

Birdell Wendt is listed in the World Who's Who of Women and the Intercontinental Biographical Assn. and the Intercontinental Biographical Dictionary.

The Wendts have lived in Mount Prospect at 12 N. Owen for seven years. In addition to Mary, there is another daughter, Nancy, who is married.

saw this article and the thought occurred to me that maybe there was something I could do," Julin said. "I was not looking for anything connected with pay."

Originally, Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley proposed using senior citizens as part-time help in areas where the seniors might be skilled. He said this would benefit the village by providing trained personnel for special projects and the seniors by providing extra income.

JULIN, AN 18-year resident of Mount Prospect, said he was not interested in a paid job with the village. "The question was, was there anything I as a resident of Mount Prospect could do to contribute to the welfare of the community without pay," he said.

As Mayor Robert D. Teichert sees it, the answer was yes.

"We got a jewel, didn't we?" Teichert said, noting Julin's background. In addition to his position with Chicago Title and Trust, Julin is vice president of the Chicago Crime Commission and vice president and treasurer of United Charities of Chicago.

"That's a really high-caliber individual. He apparently knew he was going to take an early retirement, and it couldn't have happened at a more opportune time," Teichert said. "His background and credentials couldn't be more suited to the downtown commission."

The downtown commission is charged with developing a plan for the revitalization of the central business district.

TEICHERT SAID he likes the idea of retired persons becoming active in the village. "It's just great because they have time during the day," he said. "I'm one of these people from the old school. I certainly give youth its appointed applause and time, but you just can't beat the experience of people who have lived a long time."

Several retired people already are active in the village, Teichert said, including the head of the planning commission and the head of the comprehensive plan committee.

"I'm hoping we get many more retired people," Teichert said.

There's no rush by GOP to oust Fulle

Leaders of the Cook County Republican Party in the Northwest Suburbs are not rushing to call for the ouster of Floyd T. Fulle. Of five Northwest suburban township Republican committeemen contacted Sunday, only two said they favored Fulle's resignation while the rest maintained a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Fulle, who pleaded innocent Friday to federal charges of extortion, perjury and income tax fraud, will conduct a mail poll this week of all 80 Republican county committeemen to determine if he should resign.

Only State Rep. Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg Township committeeman, and Fred Yonkers, Wheeling Township committeeman, called for Fulle's resignation from the county chairmanship.

"I said from the beginning he should step out and I would vote as such," Totten said. "The question is if we ask him to resign who would we have to replace him. As far as I know, no one is interested in the job."

TOTTEN ADDED that he did not know if Fulle intends to tally the poll by a majority vote or if he will give more weight to Chicago ward committeemen's votes over suburban township committeemen's votes.

"He apparently hasn't settled that yet but I imagine it will be something for the executive committee to resolve," Totten said.

Yonkers has called for Fulle to take a leave of absence from the chairmanship in the interest of the party. In a meeting of the Wheeling Township Republican organization last week, Yonkers read a letter calling for Fulle's withdrawal but the committeeman added that the request was being made on the assumption of Fulle's innocence.

Yonkers labeled inaccurate reports that Fulle offered his resignation at a meeting Friday of suburban township

committeemen. The Wheeling Township committeeman said Fulle only announced his intention to conduct the mail poll of committeemen and added the GOP chairman said he would abide by results of the poll.

STATE SEN. JOHN Nimrod, R-Skokie, Niles Township committeeman, said he was pleased with the attitude Fulle demonstrated at the meeting but was not

Village begins land acquisition for lake

LAKE ARLINGTON will be twice the size of Des Plaines' Lake Opeka, a popular summer sailing spot. Arlington Heights officials are condemning land as the first step toward a lake for their community.

by KURT BAER

The Village of Arlington Heights has started land condemnation proceedings for Lake Arlington, but it will still be at least several more years before the wind ripples any water on the 113-acre site along McDonald Creek.

When completed Lake Arlington will be one of the largest recreational lakes in the Northwest suburbs. Intended primarily as a flood-control project, the lake will be north of Palatine Road and east of Windsor Drive and would have a variety of recreational uses.

Trustee Frank Palmatier, chairman of the Citizens Action Committee Against Flooding, said the village has filed to condemn 68 of the 113 acres needed for the lake.

But because the village hopes to receive assistance from the Metropolitan Sanitary District and the U.S. Soil Conservation Service in building the $7.5 million lake, it could be some time before plans are drawn and construction started, he said.

THE VILLAGE board last week approved an application for state funds that could pay half the cost of acquiring the 68 acres, up to $232,000. The money is available under an open lands program of the Illinois Dept. of Conservation.

The rest of the land will have to be paid for by the village using federal-revenue sharing and general obligation bonds, Palmatier said.

The village board already has com-

Seniors back $64,000 budget bid

Arlington Heights senior citizens are expected to attend tonight's village finance committee budget hearing to support a proposed $64,000 budget for the elderly.

"We were upset at the lack of any decision (by the village board) on the three areas in our budget," said senior citizens' commission chairman John Glanopoulos. "I was informed that they decided not to file an application for federal grants. I hope they will be able to come up with the monies to support our programs."

The senior citizens' commission is asking for $24,000 to continue the reduced-fare taxicab program for the elderly, $10,000 for a multipurpose center and $25,000 to staff it, plus $5,000 to pay members of the Ecology Corps to perform odd jobs for seniors.

ALTHOUGH THE commission would like the remainder of the budget to come from the village, it recommended that

Officials said they have tried to cut back on the number of fees, limiting most required fees to textbooks. And most districts do not consider the cost beyond the financial means of most Northwest Suburban residents.

Des Plaines Dist. 62 business manager Harold Brieschke said no child is denied an education because parents can not afford costs. District will not only pick up the required fees but school officials often pay field trip and other optional costs for a low income student as well.

Applications up for public aid; extra help hired

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Ninety persons a month, many of them laid-off waitresses, truck drivers and factory workers, are walking into the Wheeling Township Hall and asking for help to pay the bills.

The 90 new monthly cases represents a significant increase in township general assistance applications — only 30 new applications were made each month last summer — and has caused the township to hire an additional caseworker.

Jane Klatt, the township's social services director, was hired in June because of the rapidly increasing general assistance program.

The township hired another full-time case worker this month, and will consider hiring a third full-time caseworker in the spring to help process general assistance applications.

WHEELING TOWNSHIP has increased its general assistance budget by $38,000, and anticipates having to allocate more than $100,000 in the next fiscal year, which begins April 1, Mrs. Klatt said.

Townships are required by law to offer some form of emergency temporary assistance to township residents. The funds for general assistance come from the taxes levied by the township and from the township's other general income, Mrs. Klatt said.

Wheeling Township offers temporary financial assistance for food, rent and utilities until the resident has been accepted for state or federal assistance, she said.

Mrs. Klatt characterized most of the applicants as working people who "have made enough money to give their families a comfortable life, and manage to meet the payments on their home and other basic expenses."

MOST OF THESE people were unable to save money while they were working, and have no financial security to draw from now that they are unemployed, she said.

Not as many younger couples or senior citizens have applied to Wheeling Township for general assistance, although applications from them "have begun to increase," Mrs. Klatt said.

"Young people who have been to college are used to skimping and learning to get along on the basics. Older people have been through the Depression. It's the middle-aged person who is being hit the hardest by this economic situation," Mrs. Klatt said.

Other area townships are experiencing similar increases in general assistance applications, but several have only begun to consider hiring additional staff to handle the overload, she said.

mitted $750,000 from federal revenue-sharing and $4.1 million in general obligation bonds to pay for land acquisition and the construction of several flood-control projects.

Additional money for the Lake Arlington land probably will have to be added to the $4.1 million bond issue which covers only the first phase of a comprehensive $16 million program, Palmatier said.

"I feel we need to acquire the Lake Arlington land to keep it from becoming involved in some development," Palmatier said. The property is now undeveloped.

Once built, the lake would be irregularly shaped and would be large enough for boating and fishing. It would be more than twice the size of Lake Opeka, at Lee and Howard streets in Des Plaines. Lake Opeka is operated by the Des Plaines Park District and is used for small sailboats, canoeing, rowing and fishing.

PALMATIER SAID once the village acquires the Lake Arlington land it probably will lease it to the Arlington Heights Park District for recreational use even before the lake is built.

He said the village is condemning the 88 acres, which lie immediately south of the Three other property parcels are needed to complete the lake site. Two lie north of the Edison right-of-way and the third, 25 acres, is part of the proposed second campus site for Harper College at Palatine and Schoenbeck roads.

the village seek Ecology Corps funding through a federal grant.

George Weinand, village administrative assistant, filed a letter of intent with the Suburban Cook County Agency on Aging, before the deadline of Feb. 1, but the village board voted against applying for the funds last week.

"It's a shame, because the Ecology Corps had an excellent chance of being funded. It's the kind of program they (the Suburban Cook County Council on Aging) are really looking for," Gianopoulos said.

The village board did vote to apply for $24,000 to continue the reduced-rate taxicab program but Gianopoulos said the grant will not be approved. "I talked to one of the people at the County Council on Aging and she said that they've already funded our transportation program as a seed program and will not fund it again.

"We want to know the reason why the village board voted down the Ecology Corps funding package but voted to apply for transportation funds," said Gianopoulos.

SEVERAL TRUSTEES voiced strong reservations and objections to the Ecology Corps project before voting down the application.

Trustee Russell Colvin said the program would create another level of "welfare." He said townships, the county and the state are already providing "welfare" and the village should not enter the field.

Other trustees voiced concerns about

MSD OKs pact to build flood basin

The Metropolitan Sanitary District has approved an agreement calling for construction of a retention basin to deter flooding in Mount Prospect and Arlington Heights.

Although the sanitary district has not purchased all land needed for the basin at Central and Busse roads, Chief Engineer Forrest C. Nell said he expects to acquire it "in short order." He said the acquisition may be completed in a month or two.

Nell earlier delayed approval of the reservoir agreement with the two villages so he could report to the sanitary district board about acquisition problems. Although the district has bought 28.7 acres, another 42.3 acres must be purchased before the basin can be built.

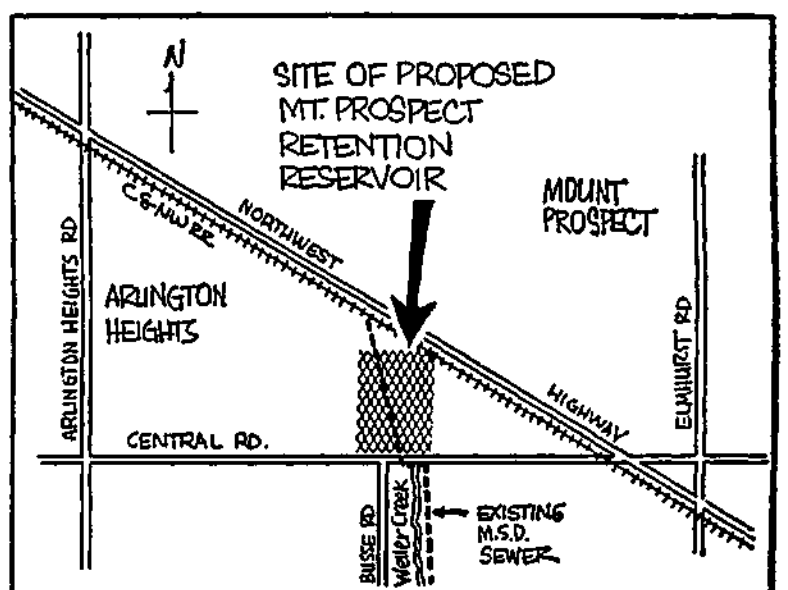

THE AGREEMENT calls for the sanitary district to pay construction costs up to $1.3 million. Anything more will be paid by Arlington Heights and Mount Prospect, with the two villages accepting maintenance of the basin.

Joanne Alter, MSD board member, said the project probably would not cost more than $1.3 million. "We're satisfied the project will meet immediate flooding needs," she said. "The villages have indicated a willingness to cooperate."

The 130-foot reservoir will first be used to retain storm water thus providing flood relief. Once the O'Hare Water Reclamation Plant construction is finished and the system of underground tunnels is completed to collect combined sewage, the MSD plans to enlarge the basin to hold combined sewage.

This expansion, however, is estimated to be as much as 10 years away.

Bicyclist's death in car accident still under probe

Arlington Heights police still are investigating an accident Friday night in which a car struck three bicyclists, killing one and injuring two others.

Pronounced dead at Northwest Community Hospital was Christopher Hart, 15, of 702 S. Dunton Ave., Arlington Heights. A companion, John Gaddis Jr., 15, of 843 S. Burton Pl., Arlington Heights, is listed as improving in good condition with leg injuries.

The third bicyclist, Frank Dicks, also 15, of 1161 S. Walnut Ave., was treated at the emergency room and released Friday night.

Police said the car, driven by Paul K. Foss, 19, of 1217 Lonnquist Blvd., Mount Prospect, was eastbound on Kirchoff Road near Dwyer Avenue. The bicyclists, reportedly riding single file on the roadway with Hart in the rear, were also eastbound on the road, police said.

Foss' car reportedly struck Hart's bicycle throwing the boy over the car. The car then went on to strike the other two youths, according to preliminary reports. Police said the road was wet from melting snow and not well lit at the scene of the accident. Hart's bicycle had lights and reflectors on the wheels and pedals.

Charges have not been filed pending completion of the investigation by Arlington Heights police.

Referendum to top park board agenda

A combined Arlington Heights Park Board and referendum-information meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. today at Pioneer Park fieldhouse, 500 S. Fernandez Ave.

The meeting will feature members of the park board of commissioners and representatives of the citizens committee which recommended the referendum, including Victor Beiser and John G. Woods, chairman.

The meeting will be open for questions about the referendum. The March 1 referendum will ask voter approval for $337,000 in bonds for "catchup" maintenance and tax-rate increases. The package would add about $11.19 to the tax bill of a $45,000 house in the district, officials said.
